PASTOR HELD FOR DEATH OF LINNELL GIRL

The Rev. Clarence Virgil Thompson Richeson, pastor of the Immanuel Baptist Church of Cambridge, was arraigned before Judge Murray in the Municipal Court of Boston to-day, charged with the murder of his former fiancee, Miss Avis Linnell of Hyannis.

Richeson was held without bail. His case was continued until October 31—the date, by a strange coincidence, announced for his wedding to Miss Violet Edmunds, a wealthy Brookline girl. He was locked up in the Charles Street Jail.

The arraignment of the prisoner was attended by the greatest excitement ever seen in Pemberton square. The courthouse was almost mobbed. Men and women fought to gain entrance to get a look at the clergyman. He stood the ordeal unperturbed.

Richeson entered the court room at 11:26 o'clock. He wore a blue business suit. He carried a rain coat and a black derby hat. He looked more like a smart business man than a clergyman.

Before his case was reached he sat on a bench with a number of men who had been arrested for lesser crimes. Some of them bore the tawdry traces of dissipation and distress. Richeson followed the tedious procession of events, his eyes turned in the direction of the judge. His face was pale, but there was no sign of the nervous condition that he was supposed to be in during the week.

Ralph Dunbar was in court to look after the legal interests of the clergyman prisoner. The lawyer had entered his appearance in the case, having been handed a slip of paper by Clerk Ingalls. Two or three cases were disposed of when a court officer touched Richeson on the shoulder.

CONTINUED TO DAY FOR WEDDING.

"Stand up," ordered the court officer.

Richeson straightened up and stepped forward to the railing. He clasped his right forearm on the bar and rested. He might partly on it. He was perfectly calm. Lawyer Dunbar stood near. Richeson's eyes sought Judge Murray's.

"Do you want the charge read?" asked Clerk Ingalls, looking at Lawyer Dunbar.

"No," replied the lawyer.

The warrant charged Richeson with the murder of Miss Avis Linnell by poison. Clerk then nodded to Sergeant John F. Mitchell, who had charge of the case in court.

"I ask for a continuance of this case," said Mitchell, "until October 31."

"Is that satisfactory to you?" Ingalls asked Dunbar.

"Yes. It is at present. Something may happen, though, that would causes me to ask for a further continuance."

Richeson was remanded to the Charles street jail, without bail. During his arraignment the court room was jammed. Trying to catch sight of the prisoner, many stood on seats.

An Amazing Tragedy.

Not in the criminal annals of America can be found a crime that contains more startling features and more elements that appeal to human emotion than the pitiful tragedy in which the life of this talented girl was snuffed out.

The prisoner is the pastor of the Immanuel Baptist Church of Cambridge. He is young, handsome and polished. His power with women was almost hypnotic. The girl whom he is accused of murdering was a member of a fine family. She lived spotless in the estimation of a host of friends. She was prominent in church work. She roomed in the building of the Boston Young Women's Christian Association.

It was in that building last Saturday evening that she swallowed the death potion that it is charged was handed to her by the clergyman under whose spell she was held, a willing prisoner. Under such an environment her parents, her friends and she herself thought she was safe.

And even when she swallowed the deadly poison—it was cyanide of potassium—she thought that it was a medicine that would benefit her. It in her semi-conscious state during the few minutes that she lived it flashed through the distorted brain of the helpless victim that she had been basely, brutally, fiendishly betrayed, she was unable to speak it.

Richeson was arrested at the home of Miss Violet Edmunds, a rich Brookline girl. He and Miss Edmunds were engaged to be married. Invitations were out for their wedding, but were recalled. It was to have been a fashionable event.

Preached After Tragedy.

The clergyman, it is claimed, bought the poison with which the girl was killed, a week ago Tuesday. He was with her last Friday and Saturday, it is charged. Late Saturday evening he was told she was dead. The next day he preached as usual. This was part of his text:

"May the words of my mouth and the meditations of my heart be acceptable in Thy sight, O Lord, my strength and my Redeemer."

Newspapers Aided Police, Says Dugan

I want to thank the newspapers for what they did in connection with this crime. They are responsible for the arrest to-day. I knew that if they printed all of the facts the man who sold that poison would come forward and tell about it. Had it not been for the newspapers it might have been weeks before we obtained the information we received last night.—Statement to-day by Chief Dugan of the Boston Bureau of Criminal Investigation.

POLICE FOUND WHERE POISON WAS BOUGHT

Here is the story of Deputy Chief of Police William B. Watts of the events leading to the arrest of the Rev. Clarence Virgil Thompson Richeson, pastor of the Immanuel Baptist Church of Cambridge, for the murder of Miss Avis Linnell.

Deputy Chief Watts tells the almost incredible story of how Richeson bought enough cyanide of potassium—the deadly poison which was given to Miss Linnell under the guise of medicine—to kill ten men. His story of the purchase of this deadly drug and the arrest of Richeson after a vigil lasting from midnight to 7:30 o'clock this morning, follows:

By WILLIAM B. WATTS,
Deputy Superintendent of Police of Boston.

"On Tuesday evening October 10, Richeson walked into the drugstore of William Hahn, of Newton Centre. He knew Hahn. Richeson knew the druggist when he was attending the Newton Theological Seminary.

"'I've got a dog at home,' Richeson told the druggist. 'The dog is whining and causing a general disturbance. I want to put it out of the way. The dog is about to have some puppies. I think I might just as well kill her now.'

"'Why, I never knew that you had a dog,' replied the druggist.

"'Oh, yes,' responded the clergyman, 'I have one at my room.'

"'Well,' remarked the druggist, 'chloroform is about the best thing I know anything about for that purpose.'"

"ACTS INSTANTLY AND IS DEADLY."

"'No,' said the minister. 'I don't want chloroform. I don't want any smell around the house. I want something that will do the work quick. Haven't you anything like that?'

"'Why yes,' said the druggist, 'cyanide of potassium acts almost instantly and is deadly poison.'

"'Well, give me some of that.'

"'That is very dangerous,' remarked the druggist. 'I'll put it in an open vial. Be careful what you do with it and do not lose the bottle.'

"The druggist said that he gave Richeson enough cyanide of potassium to kill three dogs.

"'You'd better give me two or three more chunks of that,' Richeson remarked to the druggist.

"Then Hahn put up enough of the poison to kill ten men.

"Richeson started toward the door with the poison. Turning to Hahn, he remarked:

"'Don't forget to come to my wedding. You have an invitation.'

"The druggist said he would not forget. Then Richeson said: "'It must seem mysterious to you about me buying this, but you can keep a secret.'

"I received a telephone message last night," said Deputy Chief Watts, "telling me these facts. The message reached me at my home. It came from former Representative Elias B. Bishop of No. 54 Devonshire street, who is counsel for Hahn. He said that Hahn had told him the facts as related.

"I went to Newton and talked the matter over with Hahn. He told me just what I have told you. The visit to the Edmunds house and the arrest of the clergyman followed."

MURDER IN THE FIRST DEGREE! This, according to Chief Inspector Joseph Dugan of the Bureau of Criminal Investigation, will be the charge against the person who gave Avis Linnell the cyanide of potassium which killed her at the Y. W. C. A. house in Warrenton street. WHO WAS THIS PERSON? See next Sunday's AMERICAN

HEARST URGES THE OVERTHROW OF MURPHY

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—Carnegie Hall was filled last night with a representative and, despite the rain, when the first great mass meeting of the Fusion campaign was opened. Former Lieutenant-governor M. Linn Bruce presided. Each speaker was given the closest attention and the telling points made were enthusiastically applauded.

William Randolph Hearst received a rousing welcome when he was introduced by the chairman, and his speech was punctuated by frequent outbreaks of applause. He said:

Mr. friends, this is an important election, but a simple one. The issue is clear, clear cut; is plain and the result will be far reaching. Mr. Murphy has been charge of the government of the city and of complete control of the government of the State of New York for the past year. In this election you will have the fullest opportunity to express your approval or disapproval of Mr. Murphy's administration.

If you approve of Mr. Murphy's acts and methods vote for the Murphy ticket in this election.

If you do not indorse his dictation in local affairs, his domination in State affairs and his personal direction of legislative affairs, vote for the Murphy ticket.

If you want to enlarge Murphy's sphere and to encourage his interference in judicial affairs, vote for the Murphy judicial ticket.

Get More Murphy.

If you like Murphy and haven't got enough Murphy, vote for Murphy and get more Murphy.

If you don't think taxation is heavy enough, vote for Murphy. If you think it will appreciate your confidence and do still heavier, vote again for Murphy. If you don't think rents are high enough, vote for Murphy. He will make it his pleasure and his profit to raise them higher.

If you don't think the government is bad enough, vote for Murphy. Trust him to make it worse. He will never disappointed you. Yet on Murphy nerve, on his record you can safely and every vote you give him is an indorsement for his past acts and encouragement for future efforts in the same direction.

Too Much Murphy.

But my friends, if you object to Murphy's evil methods and to his impudent activity in your public affairs, vote against the Murphy ticket.

If you think Murphy for Mayor and Murphy for Governor is enough Murphy, if you don't want Murphy's personal secretary too, then vote against the Murphy ticket.

If you are old-fashioned Jeffersonian Democrats or Democratic Republicans and believe in the people's right to rule, if you resent the unlawful control of government by the local boss and the plundering political machine; if you value your independence as citizens, if you insist and require that the Law laws was intended without to protect the machine and machine was to helpless conspiring to it, to control to the man and the machine and the minions of the machine responsible for such insult to your intelligence and such outrage to your citizenship.

The Judiciary is free you from Murphy's throttling grip. Is it not your duty to save the judiciary from Murphy's contaminating clutch?

Issue a Clear One.

The issue is clear, the problem is simple. We do not have to be learned to appreciate it. We only have to be honest. We only have to understand our rights. We only have to understand our rights as citizens and our duties as citizens.

I am not here to ask you to do anything for me. I am not here to ask you to do anything for my friends. I am here to urge you to do what is best for yourselves, for your fellow citizens and for the country.

To be sure, Mr. Hopper is a great friend of mine, but he did not request me about accepting this nomination. If he had done so I would have told him that I would have advised him to run for this office, first, because of the great patriotic issues that I knew would be exerted in some extraordinary way, and second, because I believe Mr. Hooper would serve you better in the important office.

Mr. Sheara is a friend of mine, but I assure you I am not praising him up on that account, but on good account. I cannot see how Mr. Shearn will not be giving up an income of forty or fifty thousand dollars a year and accepting a salary of $17,500 a year. As one of his friends, of almost one how I am going to benefit materially by losing the income he has, I never had or ever will have.

Who Will Wear Mourning?

Mr. Shearn is the kind of a lawyer who gets results. When he went after the Ice Trust he did not get merely an empty decision in the Wickersham way, which left things about as they were before. He broke up the Ice Trust and reduced the price of ice.

When he attacked the Gas Trust he did not make moralizing motions in the air. He just, figuratively speaking, reached for the Gas Trust's windpipe and down came the price of gas.

If you do not want Mr. Shearn as judge, he will get along perfectly well where he is, and what is more, he will continue to serve you where he is. Mr. Shearn has taken many a case for the people against plundering trusts, but never yet has he taken a fee from a trust to oppose the people and he never will. If you do not elect Mr. Shearn I will not go into mourning over the result and certainly will not wear any crape over it. But, my friends, if you elect Murphy's man, Cohalan, judge the whole community will go into mourning for that occurrence before that person's term expires.

There is no doubt about the superiority of the candidates upon the Fusion ticket over the candidates upon the Tammany ticket, but the issue involved in the election is far greater and broader than that. The vital question before you is the question of Murphy and Murphyism in that control.

Do Not Deserve Vote.

Have they tried to deserve your vote? No. They have tried to deprive you of your vote. Have they tried to make so good an administration that you would desire to vote against? No. They never gave you the opportunity to administration and have tried to restrict your vote as that you would not be capable of re-electing them. Murphy and Tammany have made a bold and defiant attempt to rob you of your political rights and liberties and so in a bold and defiant way you must defend be capable effectively to protest. If we do not resolutely smite the impudence you can hardly be said to deserve the liberties we have.

Indeed, we can hardly be expected to retain the liberties we have as a Democrat and as a Democrat I am going to fight the policies of Murphy and Tammany Hall. I believe that the greatest benefit that the loyal Democrats can confer upon the national Democracy is to free it of the hindrance and handicap of Murphy and Tammany Hall.

In appointing his State chairman yesterday, Mr. Murphy read all honest and independent Democrats out of his party. I call upon all honest and independent Democrats to unite with and read Mr. Murphy out of our party. Let us have a Democratic party which is free from Murphy control, which is in harmony with the Democracy of the nation and which can be honestly supported by all loyal Democrats and honest men.

FAST TIME ON GLIDDEN TOUR

By DUNCAN CURRY.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Oct. 20.—After the strenuous journey over the Blue Ridge mountains the trip of the Glidden tourists from Winston-Salem to this city was simply a joy ride. Most of the 135-mile journey was over smooth macadam road which would bear comparison with anything. These roads have all been built within the past two years by convicts, and the drivers made the run a veritable road race, many of them averaging fifty and sixty miles an hour over the better stretches. As a result of the hard pull through the mud of Virginia over the Blue Ridge many of the cars did not get in at all, some of them are broken down and out of the tour, while others camped out at Martinsville and came in during the morning.

From the start the tourists found the going good and quickly rolled over to High Point, N. C.

While there were only one or two penalizations, few of the cars are now left with clean scores. In the Glidden trophy contest the Maxwell and Tarrytown team are the only ones with clean scores, and only sixteen of the original fifty-four starters in the tour have not been penalized. They include four Maxwell cars, three Cadillacs, two Stevens-Duryea, two Fords and one each of Columbias, Flanders, Thomas, Olds and Americans. There is also a Mitchell, which is not competing, with a clean score.

FOSS AGAIN ATTACKS SHOE MACHINERY TRUST

ORANGE, Oct. 20.—Governor Foss began the second day of his whirlwind tour of Franklin and Hampden here this forenoon. He talked to a big and enthusiastic gathering in this industrial town. He will talk at a big rally in Northampton this evening.

The entire party will leave for Boston early on Saturday to be present at the Vermont Temple rally in the evening. On Monday they will again invade the western section of the State, starting at Lee on Monday morning.

At Greenfield Governor Foss at one of the most enthusiastic political rallies held in that town declared that the shoe industry of Massachusetts is threatened with disaster by the exactions of the United Shoe Machinery Company.

The Governor devoted almost all of his remarks at this meeting to an exposition of the methods of the shoe machinery trust, pointing out how it is that American shoe manufacturers are not only injured by the concern, but how, indeed, they are also, because of the company's foreign selling policy, brought it actively in competition with the shoemakers of the Old World.

Must Curb Shoe Trust.

He declared that the government must curb this gigantic monopoly which has secured a strangle hold on one of the most important of Massachusetts industries. He told of how he had attempted to do so at the behest of the manufacturers of the State, who had come to him imploring relief, and how Attorney-General Swift, a Republican State official, had refused his sworn duty.

He declared, as he had the night before at Warren, that he had tried every way to awaken the Attorney General—to "prod him awake," the Governor expressed it—but that he had been unable to do so.

His arraignment of the policy of the trust in Europe and here in this forenoon. He talked to a big and enthusiastic gathering in this industrial town. He will talk at a big rally in Northampton this evening.

Instructs foreign workingmen in the American factory ways, after supplying their employers with American machines upon a basis which made it impossible for this country to compete with them, was the sensation of the evening.

Loudly applauded, many of his auditors being employes of the shoe factories round about here.

Answer to Lodge.

The address was an answer to the recent speech of Senator Lodge, made at the dinner of the Boston boot and shoe men at the Hotel Somerset on Wednesday evening. The Governor denied the Senator's claim that the industry was threatened by any tariff revision. He declared that as such assumption, in the face of the plain machinery monopoly and its pernicious use, the height of absurdity.

The address was one of the last in a tiresome day of auto traveling over muddy roads in pretty little Franklin county, about the hills and lying in the Connecticut and Deerfield Valley. It was one of the largest meetings the Governor has addressed on the present trip, which has been marred to some extent by the driving rain.

The storm had ceased by nightfall, although it was far from pleasant, the weather being such an improvement over anything that had gone before that the people were out and many filled the floor way to Washington Hall, where Frank J. Donahue, candidate for Secretary of State, opened the meeting, told the audience of the issues between him and the Republican ticket comfortably, until Governor Foss arrived from Turners Falls. There he was met by the first speaker of consolidated railroad of the Democratic party, Hon. David I. Walsh, mayor of Fitchburg in the town of Southbridge.

Hon. David I. Walsh, candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, opened at Shelburne Falls, where the auto party from Greenfield, following, a muddy, slippery roads of the hilly country on a schedule which called for his return to Greenfield before 8 o'clock. He made his connection all right and was loudly applauded when he showed up in the hall to introduce Thorndike, who is running for State Treasurer, has joined the stumping party and made a tremendous hit in all the towns visited.

All Conway Was Out.

The day began at Conway, where the party arrived about 1 o'clock. It was the first time a real live Governor had ever visited the place, and despite the downpour almost the entire town, including a brass band, was out to receive him. It was a purely non-partisan gathering, the auditors including all the members of the Republican Town Committee as well as the Democratic committeemen. Several school teachers were on hand with their classes and Governor Foss had a merry time greeting the little ones, who beamed with the excitement of it all.

The two industries of Conway are a tap and die factory and a shoestring, both of which were closed in honor of the occasion, and all of the workingmen and women were present in the hall. The only day been due it was the intention of the townspeople to have made the reception even greater than it was, despite the fact that Henry M. Whitney, its most illustrious living native, has recently declared himself a foe to the principles for which the Governor stands.

The Governor lost no time in social courtesies. He tackled the conditions prevailing in the shoe industry at once, dilating on the various handicaps to which it is subject now.

Tariff and Wages.

Shoes were, in fact, the Governor's topic all day, except in the evening at Turner's Falls, when he took up the paper in dustry and showed how it was that pulp happened to get on the free list by accident. He spoke on that and kindred subjects, including the things that he has accomplished during his term, to a crowded house on Beacon Hill, for about thirty minutes at Turner's Falls, when he was obliged to hustle back to Greenfield for his address on the Shoe Machinery Trust.

The Governor had been planning all day for that speech and in the morning, when he picked up the Boston papers and saw that Senator Lodge had given him a real opportunity he was one of the most elated men in Western Massachusetts.

The address at Conway, though it was delivered in a charity way, as befitted an occasion of the kind, aroused the audience to a good degree of enthusiasm.

The Governor contrasted the conditions prevailing in the shoe trade, as a starter, with those prevailing in the cotton industry.

"Why is it," he asked, "if the tariff has such a wonderful effect on the wages as Senator Lodge would have you believe, that wages are high in the shoe industry, which is one of those having the least protection given any trade under the Payne-Aldrich tariff, while the cotton industry, one of the most highly protected in the world, pays the lowest to those engaged in it?"

Greets Children.

At Conway Frank J. Donahue devoted half an hour to the public record of Mr. Frothingham, excerpts from which he read. He also spoke on State issues, as did David I. Walsh and Mr. Thorndike. From that town the party autoed to Whately, where the Governor and candidates met with him for a brief reception. One of the incidents was the presence of A. E. Wood, one of the oldest Democrats in that section of the State, who was photographed with the Governor.

At South Deerfield another reception was held at the Lathrop House, and there Governor Foss left the party of politicians upon which a troop of school children on their way home. He went down on the sidewalk and greeted a score or more of little boys and girls, all of whom approached the auto for the purpose of filling with outstretched hands. The Governor made an address to them in the end, telling some of his own family and pets and how he felt for youngsters wherever they were found. He made a real hit with the little ones and with the crowd of men and women who had assembled.

Both he and Mr. Walsh made short addresses at this point, telling of what had been accomplished on Beacon Hill during the last few months.

At Greenfield the Governor said:

Shoe Machinery Trust.

The real danger to the shoe industry of the State is the shoe machinery trust. Senator Lodge, in a carefully prepared speech, ignored that side of the matter entirely. He talked about the 10 per cent. tariff and sought to have us believe that was the cause of all. I want to say with all possible emphasis that the shoe machinery trust, which is feared, is the real cause of the trouble.

I speak from information given me direct by the manufacturers of this State. They came to me as a committee and told me their story; and it is one which should hold the attention of every voter. By reason of the restrictions which the trust has placed upon the use of its machines in this State and also by reason of the introduction of its machines abroad under vastly more liberal conditions, the manufacturers of the State and of the country, with hands shackled behind them, are being called upon to meet the most onerous competition.

There is no need of my going into details as to the various forms of restrictions under which the trust leases its appliances in this country. A manufacturer has to take the machine, he must use the trust machinery appliances and depend on them in the main. The introduction of independent machines, no matter how great an improvement they may be over those which the trust offers, is frowned upon as sufficient excuse for taking all of his machines out of his shop. To-day I am informed that all over the country the manufacturers have improvements which could be made on machines, but which are resting on their shelves, useless, because the trust will not agree to take them up or allow the manufacturer to use them.

In contrast, on the other side, in England and Germany, and even Russia the trust has been selling its machine and educating the foreign workmen as to the ways to use them. Some of us have had an opportunity to hear Charles H. Jones has said frankly that he likes to see our machinery going abroad; but it must be remembered that in these other countries the manufacturer is a free agent. He can take what United States appliances he wants and what other appliances he may desire, and use them side by side, thus operating his factory with increased efficiency.

MARY GARDEN

Mary Garden has confessed her one great desire, which is "to meet a real murderer."

MARY GARDEN, WHO WANTS TO GET LOOK AT A REAL SLAYER

GARDEN WANTS TO SEE SLAYER

Miss Mary Garden longs to meet a murderer. "A real cold-blooded criminal, with a big conviction to his credit," was the wish expressed in a fit of rage.

The prima donna, who is in Boston for a big Sunday evening, told a reporter today that were she not a singer, she would be a detective.

She has been following the developments in the murder of Avis Linnell with the greatest interest. Her friend, Miss Graham, admitted to-day, saves all newspaper articles relating to the murder and its inquiries for her. Then, lying in bed, reads the stories and formulates her theories as to the crime.

Meeting at a dinner after a strenuous journey Miss Garden appeared wearing a little silk waist, make of which was a dress with bow of enormous size. Somehow the bow got caught in the sweater of the man who sat next to her, and in the process of unfastening it the bow came off. Miss Garden, who is quick to see the humorous side of life, laughed heartily, and when the man, who was a Presbyterian clergyman, apologized for the accident, declared that she was glad it had happened, because it gave her an opportunity to see one of the real Presbyterian clergymen she had heard so much about.

Praises Opera House.

"You know," she said, speaking of concert v. opera, "I am passionately confined. It amuses me to see how I can go on the concert with Boston, and I don't have very little concert value—for instance in Paris from Thais, and dominate that. I do in opera. Of course I wouldn't go up against the opera singers, because I am in no sense of the word a concert singer, and then in concert work there is no part to play, nothing to live up to, it is just me. But in opera I have a role to do it all in. I like it for the present it amuses me."

"I am going to sing opera this Winter in Philadelphia and in Chicago, and for a few performances here in March, when I shall sing in 'Louise,' 'Thais,' 'Faust' and possibly 'Pelleas and Melisande.'"

"To me the Boston Opera House is a perfect place to sing. If I had my way no opera house would be built larger than this. Perhaps Wagner operas are better in a larger house for the others I can't imagine a more delightful place. The acoustic properties are so splendid. No matter where one sits one can see and hear to perfection.

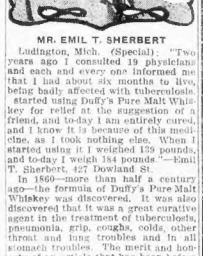
How She Sings.

"My conception of Carmen? I couldn't possibly tell you about it. I never know myself what I am going to do until I get on the stage and begin to rehearse. That is—I know in a general way but the details of how I am going to play a part, no. Someone told me that I appeared to hypnotize myself to the point of actually losing my own identity entirely in the characters I portray. That is perfectly true. For the time I am the character that I am playing.

Real upon peal of scornful laughter echoed through the room as the thought occurred to Miss Garden of some ridiculous notion she had ventured to acquire of she had gone to Spain in order to study prototypes of Carmen.

"Ridiculous," she exclaimed excitedly, "whoever heard of such an absurd idea. I answered that I had gone to the Orient to learn to play 'Salome,' and that I certainly had no intention of going to Spain for 'Carmen.' Why, I was even asked if I had gone to Egypt to watch people die because, as Melisande, my death is natural. Of course, I have to fake death," she shivered violently, "and I've never seen anyone die, or in fact, a dead person. I simply died as I imagined Melisande had died.

Consumption Cured—Gained 45 Pounds



MR. EMIL T. SHERBERT

Ludington, Mich. (Special): "Two years ago I consulted 19 physicians and each and every one informed me that I had about six months to live, being badly affected with tuberculosis.

I started using Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey for relief at the suggestion of a friend, and to-day I am entirely cured, and I know it is because of this medicine, as I took nothing else. When I started using it I weighed 139 pounds, and to-day I weigh 184 pounds."—Emil T. Sherbert, 427 Dowland St.

In 1860—more than half a century ago—the formula of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey was discovered. It was also discovered that it was a great curative agent in the treatment of tuberculosis, pneumonia, grip, coughs, colds, other throat and lung troubles and in all stomach troubles. The merit and honesty of an article that has been before the public for such a length of time cannot be questioned. Its fame has spread the world over, and it stands to-day the most celebrated and most successful medicine known.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is the only whiskey that was tested by the government as a medicine during the Spanish-American war.

The genuine is sold IN SEALED BOTTLES ONLY by all druggists, grocers and dealers, or direct $1.00 per large bottle.

REFUSED $20,000 TO WED ASTOR

AUBURN, N. Y., Oct. 20.—Congratulations are still being showered on the head of Mrs. Mr. Kennedy of Boston for his attack on the divorce evil which aroused the delegates to the Presbyterian synod of New York to applause and in which he referred to the scandal caused by the recent wedding of Colonel John Jacob Astor and Miss Madeline Force.

"The divorce evil is assuming alarming proportions in New England," he said, "but I know our Presbyterian clergyman to whom an agent for Colonel Astor came last Summer and, asking him to perform the Astor-Force wedding, said: 'I will not be worth $20,000 to you,' the minister replying: 'You are not enough money to get me to perform that ceremony.' That clergyman was the late Dr. Spring of the Presbyterian Church. Another mention of this scandal was made by a Presbyterian can so proud," said the late Dr. Hall of Brooklyn Church, "as when a divorced woman was refused membership in the Westminster Presbyterian Church because of her divorcements held in Boston."

The States of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut were dropped from the New York synod and under the title of the New England synod they will as the General Assembly to confirm its new organization.

KILLED ON WAY TO FUNERAL

The hearse that carried his grandfather to the grave was used to transport to his home the body of Sergeant Edward Garrison of No. 56 Summer street, Chelsea, who was killed by falling from a back on the way home from the funeral.

The boy had attended the service at St. Mary's cemetery, Winchester, and with his parents, was on his way home in one of the carriages. On Main street, Winchester, he was leaning against the door when it flew open and he fell to the street. Around him gathered a frightened group of mourners and relatives. They sought to give him first aid measures but soon realized that he was dead.

SUPPOSED HEIRESS ACCUSED OF LARCENY

Freda Corey, of No. 5 Oliver place, South End, said to be heiress to a fortune of $150,000 left by an uncle in Ireland, appeared in the City Police Court to-day in answer to a complaint which charges her with the larceny of a locket and chain valued at $175 from Benjamin Silverman, a jewelry merchant, who lives at No. 687 Massachusetts avenue. It is alleged in the complaint that he allowed the girl to take a locket and chain for examination with the idea that she might ultimately buy it.

Backache is kidney ache in most cases. The kidneys cause the aching with dull pain because there is inflammation within. You can't be rid of the ache until you cure the cause—the kidneys. There is no better recommended remedy than Doan's Kidney Pills.

Miss Sarah A. Berry, trained nurse, 100A Main St., Maldon, Mass., says: "In my profession as a trained nurse I see cases of kidney disorder every day. In my office, I have found Doan's Kidney Pills to be an excellent remedy for curing the conditions arising from such disorders. They seem to act as a general regulator and tonic for almost every symptom of those derangements. I have no hesitation in recommending Doan's Kidney Pills my endorsement."

OLDTIME REMEDY DARKENS THE HAIR. DANDRUFF AND FALLING HAIR QUICKLY STOPPED.

From time immemorial, sage and sulphur have been used for the hair and scalp. Almost everyone knows of the value of such a combination for darkening the hair, for curing dandruff and falling hair, and for making the hair grow.

In olden times the only way to get a hair tonic of this sort was to brew it in the home fireplace, a method which was troublesome and not always satisfactory. Nowadays almost every up-to-date druggist can supply his patrons with a ready-to-use product, skillfully compounded in perfect-ly equipped laboratories. The Wyeth Chemical Company of New York put up an ideal remedy of this sort, called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, and authorize druggists to sell it under guarantee that the money will be refunded if it fails to do exactly as represented.

If you have dandruff, or if your hair is turning gray or coming out, don't delay, but get a bottle of this remedy to-day, and see what a few days' treatment will do for you.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists.

ELEVEN JURORS FOR M'NAMARA

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 20.—The McNamara trial was resumed today with the questioning of T. W. Adams, a retired coal, whose home, by Attorney Horton for the State. Adams was the second of the eighteen prospective jurors to be examined by the prosecution.

"You're a socialist, I believe?" was the first question put to Adams. He said he had been one for the years, that he favored a change in governmental conditions, that many laws were enforced in his opinion, would be better not enforced, and that he was opposed to the forms of government.

"You understand that in this case the death penalty is involved?"

"Not only are naturally opposed to it, but I don't know that I would be in a state of mind [illegible] to call."

"Can you do your full duty as a juror in this case?" Darrow asked, and Horton retorted for the defense, who are Socialists.

HUNT FIREBUG IN ROXBURY

Search for a firebug is being made today, following a $600 blaze in the cellar Nos. 2009 and 2012 Washington street. The Fire Department had a rough fight on account of gas from severed pipes.

The blaze was discovered by neighbors two hours after the stores on the first floor had been closed. The firemen found the back door, which had been left locked by the employes of the Highland Furniture Company, wide open, and the interior soaked in gasoline.

MISS FOLEY TO PRESS CHARGES

Miss Margaret Foley, of Roxbury, the Suffragist who followed Lieutenant Governor Frothingham on his tour of the western part of the State, has issued a statement in regard to her clash with Patrolman J. Alfred Wragg, of Division 10, when she accuses of having used undue violence on September 26; when he went with her to the station house, after as the patrolman charges, she had tried to interfere with Mr. James McGreevy at an open-air political rally. Miss Foley promises the patrolman she will make further complaint against him.

Miss Foley's statement is in answer to that of Patrolman Wragg on Wednesday, where he denied that he roughed Miss Foley at all on the way to the police station, and added that though twenty-three days have passed she has made no official complaint against him. This is Miss Foley's reply:

"Officer Wragg is complaining because twenty-two or twenty-three days have elapsed and I have entered no complaint against him. I should like to remind the officer that I entered a very prompt complaint against him on the night of the Ward 19 rally. I entered that complaint with the captain at the desk for unnecessary force and violence. My charge was made in the presence of Sergeant Acasso. Officer Wragg himself, several other officers and the members of my own party.

"Those who were present may remember the remarks made by Officer Wragg after I had made my charge. He said: 'If you were only a man!'

"To which I answered quickly, 'If you were only half a man, you great big brute!'

"There were plenty of witnesses to hear both my charges and Officer Wragg's remarks. On the next day several women who were present at the Ward 19 rally came personally to Station 10 to protest vehemently against the treatment that one of their members had received at the hands of an officer of the law.

"And yet Mr. Wragg claims that no complaint against him has been made. But I should like to add that further complaint is being made. The executive board of the Woman Suffrage Association has taken the action which was not mine as an individual to make.

"The board has already begun proceedings, but preparations for the National Woman's Suffrage convention and the fact that the convention itself has called almost all the members of the board to Louisville, late caused an unnecessary delay. I have been away for nearly two weeks on the State campaign, and as a result the action of the association has been slower than I should have wished.

"But that does not mean that it is not going at all. I am not forgetting that night in Ward 19, and the Massachusetts Equal Suffrage Association is not forgetting the unnecessary violence done to one of its members."

BOSTON WOMEN TALK SUFFRAGE

By GERTRUDE L. MARVIN.
Special Representative of the AMERICAN at Suffrage Convention.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Oct. 20.—Yellow banners, flowers and [illegible]ers and box of hurrying women all over the city proclaim the opening of the National Woman's Suffrage Association here. More than 200 delegates are here and the arrivals are coming in on every train.

Fifty thousand Massachusetts women enrolled as suffragists and 30,000 more who belong to labor organizations which have endorsed the cause, are represented at this national convention in Kentucky by eight Boston delegates. They are under the leadership of their State president, Alice Stone Blackwell. The other delegates are Mrs. Richard V. Hittinger, Miss Agnes Ryan, editor of the Woman's Journal; Mrs. Stanley McCormick, Miss Eleanor Garrison, Mrs. H. Lane, Miss Florence Luscomb and Miss Gertrude Marvin. They are staying at the Hotel Seelbach, the largest hotel in the city. They will make general headquarters for the convention, where several of the speakers will be entertained.

Miss Jane Addams of Hull House, Chicago, Mrs. Rheinallet Pankhurst, the famous English suffragist, M. Carey Thomas, president of Bryn Mawr, Dr. Anna Howard Shaw of New York, Miss Laura clay, granddaughter of Cassius Clay, vice president of the Kentucky Equal Rights Association, Miss Mary Johnston, author of "To Have and To Hold"; Miss Sophonisba Breckenridge of Chicago, Miss Belle Case Follette, daughter of Senator LaFollette; Mrs. Lewis Jerome Johnson, wife and Mrs. Ernest Thompson Seton are some of the prominent women suffragists who are to arrive during the convention.

Rally in Cincinnati.

The Massachusetts delegation arrived in Louisville twelve hours late, but the time was not wasted, as the delegates stopped in Cincinnati to hold one of those outdoor meetings which are an old story in Massachusetts, but which were new in southern Ohio.

It all happened quite casually, the way the really big things in history always do. Trains were late and the suffragettes, in a special car which was plastered over with "Votes for Women" labels, and which had brought them straight from New York, had to wait over in Cincinnati from 10 o'clock till 2. They started out to see the town, and happening to meet some townsfolk, they immediately responded with that same old Massachusetts reaction, and said: "Let's have a street rally."

The first thing to do was to get a permit, and so they sought out the chief of police. What especially impressed them about this Ohio chief, in addition to his being very courteous and granting them a permit as a matter of course, was his official badge, which was lovely to be encrusted with diamonds and rubies. They never saw one like this in Massachusetts, and want to know why not.

The permit obtained, the next thing was to get a banner, so that people seeing a crowd on the street would not think that it was just that some woman had fainted. "No," said Mrs. Fitzgerald, telling about it at her hotel, "we went into a nearby drug store, and the clerk was most obliging. He got us a little thin piece of board and some yellow crepe paper to wind around it. Then he broke off a lathe from somewhere and we nailed the thing to the stick, and there was the old familiar 'Votes for Women' which gave us courage to quite a start when he saw it, and found out what this crowd of women were really going to do.

Spoke from Bean Box.

"We were about a mile and a half from the place where we had the permit to speak, so we all piled on to the street car, taking the sign along with us, and it gave us quite a lot of fun. One young chap was particularly enthusiastic, and though he had to leave the car before we did, he stood on the edge of the sidewalk, waiving his hat after us as far as he could see.

"When we reached the particular spot, there was nothing for us to stand on, so we went into another store. There the obliging clerk, instead of objecting to the proverbial soap box, actually produced a nice little square box labeled 'Eight Cans with "Baked Beans,"' and so standing on a Boston bean box, a Boston suffragist made the first out-door speech on votes for women in which southern Ohio ever had the privilege of listening.

N. SALLINGER WANTS TO KNOW

Why should a man pay a whole week's salary at one time for a suit of clothes?

(I'm talking now to men who make from $12 to $50 a week.)

TO-DAY there is absolutely no necessity for it. In the past if a man needed a suit of clothes he either paid a full week's salary for it, or, if he were unable to part with that much money at one time, he was at the mercy of old style credit methods — which meant a high price for inferior values—for the accommodation of credit he had to take clothing of no reputation, and pay a big profit.

No man need pay a full week's salary at one time for a suit or overcoat. I will sell him on credit, at cash prices, any of the leading brands of high grade clothing with a reputation—that is being advertised nationally and locally.

N. SALLINGER, Proprietor Peoples Credit Co.

I have men customers who get salaries all the way from $12 to $50 a week. A fraction of the weekly salary enables them to open up a credit account at the Peoples Credit Co.

I revolutionized the men's department of the credit business when I made it possible for a man to buy on Credit, at Cash Prices, any of the leading Brands of National reputation—made by the most reputable concerns in America, who have spent hundreds of thousands of dollars advertising their product, and who stand behind every garment. We carry the following: High Art Clothes, made by Strouse & Bros., Baltimore; Cashion Clothes, made in Rochester, N. Y.; Frankel System Clothes, made by Frankel Bros., New York City, including the Famous Frankel Fifteen Dollar Suit; Character Clothes (Union Made), in New York City—and several other well-known brands that we cannot name in connection with credit selling on account of special arrangements with makers. These brands are well known locally and nationally. We sell them at cash prices on credit for $1 a week.

Our clothes are guaranteed to give good service or a new garment free

PASTOR RICHESON WITH AVIS LINNELL FRIDAY

HYANNIS MAN SAW THEM TOGETHER; GIRL LOOKED PALE AND WORN.

minutes of the time that the girl was discovered.

Miss Hathaway immediately went to the telephone and called Dr. Hubbart. She arrived at the association rooms about 7:25.

She took one look at Miss Linnell and then, after feeling of her pulse, asked excitedly, "Where has she been to-day? What has she eaten?"

I responded that she had eaten breakfast and supper in the association dining room, but had taken lunch with her fiance outside.

"Where is he?" she asked. "Get him here at once. This is the place for him. Who is he anyway?"

I answered the questions as best I could and as rapidly. They were interrupted by a frightful shriek. It was with difficulty that I succeeded in getting in replies to all of them.

"You can't do anything for her here. She must go to the City Hospital at once," said Dr. Hubart, who, on first view expressed the theory that the young woman was suffering from uremic convulsions.

She did not wait for anyone else to act. She went to the telephone and called the City Hospital, ordering an ambulance to be sent in haste to the association.

She immediately went upstairs to where Miss Linnell lay.

She felt of the young woman's pulse again and, as she held the arm, the pulse beat was imperceptible. She made tests to ascertain positively that life was extinct.

She then went down to the office and, calling up the City Hospital, countermanded the order for the ambulance.

She then called the medical examiner on the telephone and informed him of the circumstances. This was at 2:35 o'clock.

We left things just as they were in the betiroom, closing the door and also that to the chamber where she lay so that things might be undisturbed until the medical examiner arrived.

I requested the girls to return to their rooms and dispatched a message to Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Linnell at Hyannis.

Then for the first time I had an opportunity to talk with Miss Hanscomb and she informed me as to what Rev. Richeson had told over the 'phone. Even at the first impression, it appeared to me to be the strangest reply to a call to a fiance to come to the bedside of a deceased young woman that I had ever heard.

I had Miss Hanscomb inform the police inspector, the medical examiner and other officials word for word, as nearly as she could remember, what passed between her and the clergyman across the line.

I have questioned all of the girls who knew Miss Linnell or who roomed with her frequently and gave all the information I acquired to the police and Dr. Leary, the medical examiner.

Miss Nellie Barkhouse of Hyannis, who has been a boarder at the Y. W. C. A., denied statements that she had said she saw Richeson and her friend, Avis Linnell together on Tremont street Saturday afternoon. She [illegible] she saw Miss Linnell for the last time alive Saturday afternoon in the association rooms. She said Miss Linnell had often mentioned Richeson as her fiance and had spoken of going to luncheon with her, Continued Next Page.

Avis was a good girl, said Miss Barkhouse. "The person responsible for her death should be punished. She was very bellicose, however, and I am glad the line carried her secret to the grave with her."

RICHESON'S WEDDING TO MISS EDMANDS IS DECLARED OFF

Miss Victor Edmands, the Brookline heiress and daughter of Moses Grant Edmands, wealthy real estate operator, and friend of the Baptist Missionary Society, will not marry Rev. Clarence Virgil Thompson Richeson, the central figure in the Avis Linnell poison murder mystery, according to a statement made today. The rupture in the relations of the couple comes as a direct result of the startling turn the developments in the murder case have taken within the last twenty-four hours, it was said.

Miss Edmands, it became known, is ill in the home of her parents. Her friends say she is suffering from the strain of the past four or five days and the linking of her fiance's name with that of the unfortunate choir singer, who was slain at the Y. W. C. A. last Saturday night.

Invitations Recalled.

The announcement of the breaking off of the engagement between the pastor and Miss Edmands came as one of the surprises of the day. It was understood that invitations which had been sent out for the ceremony on October 31 have been recalled and the marriage will not take place. It was explained further, however,

GAS, DYSPEPSIA, INDIGESTION AND ALL OTHER STOMACH MISERY GOES.

If your meals don't fit comfortably, or you feel bloated after eating, and you believe it is the food which fills you; if what little you eat lies like a lump of lead on your stomach; if there is difficulty in breathing after eating, eructations of sour, undigested food and acid, heartburn, brash or a belching of gas, you can make up your mind that you need something to stop food fermentation and cure Indigestion.

To make every bite of food you eat aid in the nourishment and strength of your body, you must rid your Stomach of poisons, excessive acid and stomach gas which sours your entire meal—interferes with digestion and causes so many sufferers of Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Biliousness, Constipation, Griping, etc. Your case is no different—you are a stomach sufferer, though you may call it by some other name; your real and only trouble is that which you eat does not digest, but quickly ferments and sours, producing almost any unhealthy condition.

A case of Pape's Diapepsin will cost fifty cents at any Pharmacy here, and will convince any stomach sufferer five minutes after taking a single dose that Fermentation and Sour Stomach is causing the misery of Indigestion.

No matter if you call your trouble Catarrh of the Stomach, Nervousness or Gastritis, or by any other name—always remember that a certain cure is waiting at any drugstore the moment you decide to begin its use.

Pape's Diapepsin will regulate any out of order Stomach within five minutes, and digest promptly, without any fuss or discomfort all of any kind of food you eat.

RHEUMATISM IS CURABLE

Nature Has Provided a Way of Driving the Poison from the Blood Which Is the Only Cure.

In attacks of acute rheumatism there is a rapid thinning of the blood, the number of red corpuscles are reduced. These red corpuscles carry oxygen which is the weapon with which nature fights poisons in the blood.

Without proper treatment the rheumatic poisons in the blood increase and the body's means of defence is weakened. A remedy that will increase the number of red corpuscles under these conditions will cure rheumatism.

The direct action of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People is to increase the red corpuscles in the blood, making it rich and red. Any doctor can prove this. It is merely a matter of microscopic count. And any sufferer can tell that as the blood becomes richer the rheumatic pains disappear. Mr. Richard Kelly, a night watchman, of No. 124 Auburn Place, Rockford, Ill., says:

"I suffered from rheumatism for a number of years and was so bad off at times that I had to take to bed. The trouble followed an attack of typhoid fever, when I was a young man, which left me in bad shape. The rheumatism settled in my right shoulder and arm. I also had a lame back. I suffered a great deal and often when ploughing in the field would have to stop and lie down as the pains were so intense and came on so suddenly. I also had a very bad cough for years and my friends said it was consumption.

"I took the doctor's medicine for a while, but as it wasn't helping me I gave it up. I read about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and gave them a trial. After taking a few boxes I could see they were helping me and I took them until cured. I had not been much of a believer in doctors and medicines but Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People certainly cured me of both the rheumatism and the cough."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are on sale at all druggists, or they will be sent to any address by mail, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

A valuable booklet, "Diseases of the Blood," will be sent free upon request.

SAYS PROF. FERRERO.
"Eggs preserved months and even years," says noted Italian historian in an article in the City Life section of SUNDAY'S AMERICAN.

FIENDISH PLOT TO KILL THE GIRL

ONE OF THE MOST ATROCIOUS OF BAY STATE CRIMES.

It came out to-day in a statement made for the first time by Mrs. William J. McLellan, sister of the unfortunate Avis Linnell, that Avis and Richeson announced their engagement at a special dinner party three years ago.

"It was a party given in our home," said Mrs. McLean. "They made their engagement known. Both of them were there at the time. He gave Avis a diamond ring to seal their engagement, and she told all of her friends and he introduced her always as his future wife. Soon everybody in town knew they were engaged.

"If he denies this fact, then he is guilty of a falsehood, and he knows it. I talked to several people recently and they are as much shocked as myself to hear that he has denied his engagement to Avis.

"He was the only man with whom Avis ever kept company. Richeson was the first and the last. There was no other man."

Mrs. McLean, next-door neighbor of the Linnells at Hyannisport, spoke fondly of the dead girl, whom she knew before she ever thought of putting on long dresses. She said Avis was one of the sweetest girls in the world, and that every body loved her.

When Avis's sister came back here from Boston and told us how happy Avis was with him, we were all happy," said Mrs. McLean. "Then to hear the dreadful news of her death! It was so terrible. It was a shock to us all.

"Avis was looking forward brightly to her wedding to Richeson. There was nothing else in life for her, but her marriage and happiness. Last Summer, when she was here, all her conversation centered about her wedding. She said no date had been fixed, but that it would be soon.

Kept Faith in Him.

"Even after she found he was engaged to Miss Edmands, she believed his denials and had faith in him when he protested that he loved but one girl in the world—dear, poor, little Avis. She trusted him implicitly.

It was no idle boast of Richeson's that he had been to Leominster. Citizens there recalled him to-day as the man who always appeared in a tall silk hat, very handsome in appearance who was reported engaged to one of the prettiest girls in the place. He was known as "Rev. Mr. Richeson," and the people recalled that there were three initials to his name before the Richeson part of it was reported. That was a year and a half or more ago, and since that time they have not heard of him, they said.

A dispatch from Liberty, Mo., to the AMERICAN to-day says: Rev. Clarence Richeson is thirty-five years of age. Usually his age has been given as twenty-eight or twenty-nine years. The dispatch, which tells of expulsion from college for cheating, follows:

Cheated in College.

"Rev. Clarence Richeson is thirty-five years of age and was born in Amherst County, Virginia. He attended William Jewell College here between 1900 and 1905. He was aided during the first three years by Rev. H. F. Johnson, No. 4100 Delmar boulevard, St. Louis, Mo., and afterwards by Rev. Rucker, of the Immanuel Baptist Church, of Kansas City. He was highly respected at first, but was expelled in 1905 for a flagrant case of cheating on examination. He brought suit against the college for alleged slander, but dropped it and later confessed. He went to Leadville, Col., where he obtained a pastorate. He left there for Boston. Last year he asked the faculty for grades that he might enter Rochester Baptist Theological Seminary. The grades were refused."

Additional facts come from Dublin, N. H., to-day, where Richeson spent a part of the Summer. The Edmands Summer home is in Dublin. It was said to-day Richeson made two trips to the town, and that he was frequently seen riding horseback along the roads with Miss Violet Edmands as his companion.

Dublin people, it was declared, thought the young woman appeared to be "infatuated" with him, while they regarded him as "very, very" attentive to her.

Friends Are Investigating.

Discussing the decision of members of the church to undertake an independent investigation to clear Richeson's name, Frank H. Carter, of No. 147 Magazine street, Cambridgeport, said to an AMERICAN reporter:

"The friends of Mr. Richeson are conducting an independent investigation along their own lines. We hope to show by this investigation that our pastor, Rev. C. T. Richeson had no connection with the unfortunate affair and is not connected with the crime. This affair has placed a blot upon our church which we as loyal parishioners intend to clear up. We hope to show that another man, and not Rev. Mr. Richeson was responsible."

During the past few days many rumors have been circulated in Cambridge that Rev. Mr. Richeson was being secreted at the house of one of his friends in Cambridge. It has been claimed that he was in hiding at No. 147 Magazine street. A Boston AMERICAN reporter went there and asked Mr. Carter this question:

"Is the Rev. Mr. Richeson in this house?" Mr. Carter answered "No."

"Has he been here since Sunday evening?"

"No."

"Do you expect that he will come here?" Mr. Carter answered "We do not."

Have Faith in Richeson.

During the evening many friends of Mr. Richeson, who are interested in this new investigation, called at the Carter home. All expressed their faith in their pastor and their confidence that he would be shown to be entirely blameless.

It was reported that Mr. Carter, with whom the Rev. Mr. Richeson lived, had declared that the minister was innocent. He would be know the name of the man who gave Miss Linnell the poison, was reported investigated by Chief Dugan. He had a talk with Mr. Carter after which he said to an AMERICAN reporter:

"Mr. Carter denies that he ever told anyone that he knew the Rev. Mr. Richeson was innocent of any connection with the case, and that he knew the name of the man who gave Miss Linnell the poison. I talked with Mr. Carter at length and he told me what he knew of the Rev. Mr. Richeson."

Chief Dugan had a long conference with District-Attorney Pelletier but it was upon another matter and the case of Miss Linnell was not brought up at that time.

Chief Dugan was asked if Miss Lucille Ziegler, who was Miss Linnell's roommate at the Young Women's Christian Association, had told him that Miss Linnell said she was out walking and to luncheon with the minister on Saturday afternoon. Chief Dugan replied:

"Miss Ziegler and the other girls whom I questioned at the Y. W. C. A. said that Miss Linnell had remarked that she was out to luncheon with 'her friend.' They knew of no other gentleman friend and had never seen Miss Linnell with any man except the Rev. Mr. Richeson, and they believed from her remark that she was out with him on Saturday afternoon."

PASTOR'S REPLY TO NEWS SHOCKED FRIENDS OF GIRL

Miss Ines Hanscomb, the young Y. W. C. A. girl who informed Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson over the telephone last Saturday night of the death of Avis Linnell, was the first arrival to the police of the incidents that followed the discovery of Miss Linnell's still living body in the bathroom at the institution, says the Cambridgeport, Cambridgeport, said to an AMERICAN reporter:

"Did she say anything before she died?"

"No, she didn't say anything before she died," Miss Hanscomb says she told the preacher, "but she did say something this afternoon."

Miss Hanscomb's statement follows:

Miss Julia Patterson, superintendent of the association, was upstairs, and I, being a friend of Miss Linnell, and knowing that she and the Rev. Mr. Richeson were understood to be engaged, assumed the task, at Miss Patterson's request, of notifying the Rev. Mr. Richeson.

"This is the Rev. Mr. Richeson," the man remarked as I answered the ring. I thought that there must be some mistake, as the voice sounded like that of a man much older than Mr. Richeson is said to be.

"This is Miss Hanscomb, at the Y. W. C. A., Boston," I stated, "and I called you to inform you that Miss Linnell has died here and that we want you to come immediately so that you may arrive by the time the medical examiner arrives."

"Miss Linnell is dead, but why did you call me?" asked the man at the other end of the line.

"Because you were the only friend of Miss Linnell near at hand," I replied, "and because we felt that you should know of the fact, that you might come at once. Miss Linnell spoke of but one man as her fiance, and she mentioned your name at all times."

I felt at the time that the Rev. Mr. Richeson's answers were unusual, to say the least, for one supposed to be the fiance of the young woman.

"I remember that I applied Miss Linnell at Hyannis three years ago," responded the Rev. Mr. Richeson, "I know her folks at Hyannis, where I used to preach, but I do not know why I should be called in regard to the matter. You know the names of her parents, do you not?"

I responded that we did, but that we felt that in that he was her fiance. In that she was out to lunch with him during the day, it was right that we should notify him at once, particularly in that he was the most easily accessible of all her relatives and friends.

"Out to lunch with me to-day?" said the Rev. Mr. Richeson. "What do you mean by that? I was not at lunch with Miss Linnell to-day."

"Well," I responded, "the medical examiner will soon be here, and there is but little time for you to get here if you are coming."

I could hear the man's voice across the line, but I could not understand what he said in regard to this. I told him that he would have to talk louder, for I could not hear what he was saying.

"Did she say anything before she died?" came the voice across the line.

The question took me entirely by surprise, coming from the mouth of a clergyman, and the fiance of a girl who had just passed away. I hardly knew what I said, but I retorted: "No, she didn't say anything before she died, but she said something this afternoon."

There the conversation came to an end. Miss Lucille Ziegler had been standing at my elbow all through it, and she, as well as I, was at a loss to account for the clergyman's demeanor. We had but few words concerning the conversation at the time because the excitement was so intense that we had little time to discuss anything. It was a time for action and not for words.

The medical examiner was soon on the scene and that was another occasion for getting matters into an unusual condition. It was some time before we had an opportunity to talk the matter over.

I informed Miss Patterson as to what the Rev. Mr. Richeson had said. She, in the meantime, had sent a telegraphic message to the family of the young woman at Hyannis. Most of us girls went to our rooms in order to give the medical examiner and the others a chance to work unmolested.

That is all there was to the matter so far as I was concerned. I could not get the facts concerning the conversation with the Rev. Mr. Richeson off of my mind, and at the earliest possible moment I communicated them to Miss Patterson.

I am still at a loss to know what put it into my mind to say that Miss Linnell had had "a chance to say something during the afternoon."

Miss Juliet C. Patterson, superintendent of the Y. W. C. A. on Warrenton street, said that Miss Hanscomb spoke to her on the telephone after Dr. Mary Hobart, who was called in, had exclaimed:

"Where is her fiance? Get him here at once! This is the place for him. Who is he, anyway?"

Miss Patterson's statement follows:

This is most undesirable publicity and notoriety for the association, but it is as well that the true conditions be known.

On Saturday night the young women had eaten their supper shortly after 6 o'clock and most of them had gone to their rooms. On reading rooms or parlor.

I was in the office at 7:10, when Miss Hathaway came in and said that Miss Linnell was in the bath room and was making a noise as though she were in pain.

Several of the young women had tried to force the door, but in vain. Finally, however, a number of them combined, succeeded in getting the door open.

There before us, sitting on a chair with her feet and ankles immersed in water in the bath tub, sat Miss Linnell. Her head was thrown back and waving from side to side. It was apparent that she was in pain.

We immediately laid her down on the floor and then removed her to a bed. I was under the impression that she was suffering because of what she had eaten during the day.

I immediately gave directions that Dr. Mary Hobart of Boylston street be notified. This was within five

WOULD LIE AWAKE ALL NIGHT WITH ITCHING ECZEMA

Terrible Sufferer Ever Since He Can Remember. Utterly Intolerable. Seemed Beyond Medical Power to Cure. "My Disease Was Routed by Cuticura Soap and Ointment."

"I take great pleasure in praising the wonderful Cuticura Cures. Ever since I can remember I was a terrible sufferer of eczema and other irritating skin diseases. I would lie awake all night, and my suffering was intolerable. A scaly humor settled on my back, and being but a child, I naturally scratched it. It was a burning, itching sensation, and utterly intolerable, in fact, it was so that I could not possibly forget about it. It did not take long before it spread to my shoulders and arms, and I was almost covered with a mass of raw flesh on account of my scratching it. I was in such a condition that my hands were tied.

A number of physicians were called, but it seemed beyond their medical power and knowledge to cure me. Having tried numerous treatments without deriving any benefit from them, I had given myself up to the agony of my dreadful malady, but I thought I would take the Cuticura treatment as a last resort. Words cannot express my gratitude to the one who created The Cuticura Remedies, as I have tarried them, for thank heaven there was such a miracle as the Cuticura Remedies sent to the suffering world, and now I feel as if I never suffered. I am even a pimple. My disease was routed by Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and I shall never cease praising the wonderful merits they contain. I will never be without them, in fact, I can almost dare any skin diseases to attack me so long as I have Cuticura Remedies in the house." (Signed) C. Louis Yeats, 939 Chestnut st., Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 29, 1910.

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold throughout the world, a liberal sample of each, with 32-p. book on the skin will be sent free, on application to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Dept. 20B, Boston.

PASTOR RICHESON WITH AVIS LINNELL FRIDAY

HYANNIS MAN SAW THEM TOGETHER; GIRL LOOKED PALE AND WORN.

minutes of the time that the girl was discovered.

Miss Hathaway immediately went to the telephone and called Dr. Hobart. She arrived at the association rooms about 7.25.

She took one look at Miss Linnell and then, after feeling of her pulse, asked excitedly, "Where has she been to-day? What has she eaten?"

I responded that she had eaten breakfast and supper in the association dining room but had taken lunch with her fiance outside.

"Where is her fiance? Get him here at once. This is the place for him. Who is he anyway?"

I answered the questions as best I could and as quickly. They were repeated so rapidly that it was with difficulty that I succeeded in getting in replies to all of them.

"You can't do anything for her here. She must go to the City Hospital at once," said Dr. Hobart, who, on first view expressed the theory that the young woman was suffering from uremic convulsions.

She did not wait for anyone else to act. She went at once to the telephone and called the City Hospital, ordering an ambulance to be sent in haste to the association.

She immediately went upstairs to where Miss Linnell lay.

She felt of the young woman's pulse again and, as she held the arm, the pulse beat was imperceptible. She made tests to ascertain positively that life was extinct.

She then went down to the office and, calling up the City Hospital, countermanded the order for the ambulance.

She then called the medical examiner on the telephone and informed him of the circumstances. This was at 7.35 o'clock.

We left things just as they were in the bathroom, closing the door and also that to the chamber where she lay so that things might be undisturbed until the medical examiner arrived.

I requested the girls to return to their rooms and dispatched a message to Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Linnell at Hyannis.

Then for the first time I had an opportunity to talk with Miss Hanscomb and she informed me as to what Rev. Richeson had said across the line. Even at the first impression, it appeared to me to be the strangest reply to a call to a fiance to come to the bedside of a deceased young woman, that I had ever heard.

I had Miss Hanscomb inform the police inspector, the medical examiner and other officials word for word, as nearly as she could remember, what passed between her and the clergyman across the line.

I have questioned all of the girls who knew Miss Linnell or who talked with her frequently and give all the information I acquired to the police and Dr. Leary, the medical examiner.

Miss Nellie Barkhouse of Hyannis, who has been a boarder at the Y. W. C. A., denied statements that she had said she saw Richeson and her friend, Avis Linnell together on Tremont street Saturday afternoon. She said she saw Miss Linnell for the last time also Saturday afternoon in the association rooms. She said Miss Linnell had often mentioned Richeson as her fiance and had spoken of going to luncheon with her "gentleman friend."

"Avis was a dear, good girl," said Miss Barkhouse. "The person responsible for her death should be punished. She was very reticent, however, and I am afraid she has carried her secret to the grave with her."

NELLIE BARKHOUSE.

Miss Barkhouse boarded at the home of the Young Women's Christian Association.

RICHESON'S WEDDING TO MISS EDMANDS IS DECLARED OFF

Miss Violet Edmands, the Brookline heiress and daughter of Moses Grant Edmands, wealthy real estate operator, and head of the Baptist Missionary Society, will not marry Rev. Clarence Virgil Thompson Richeson, the central figure in the Avis Linnell poison murder mystery, according to a statement made to-day. The rupture in the relations of the couple comes as a direct result of the startling turn the developments in the murder case have taken within the last twenty-four hours, it was said.

Miss Edmands, it became known, is ill in the home of her parents. Her friends says she is suffering from the strain of the past four or five days and the linking of her fiance's name with that of the unfortunate choir singer, who was slain at the Y. W. C. A. last Saturday night.

Invitations Recalled.

The announcement of the breaking off of the engagement between the pastor and Miss Edmands came as one of the surprises of the day. It was understood that invitations which had been sent out for the ceremony on October 31 have been recalled and the marriage will not take place. It was explained further, however, that the Cambridge pastor and fiancee regard the calling off of the wedding as only a temporary postponement.

RICHESON ASKED IF GIRL SAID ANYTHING BEFORE DEATH

Remarkable Incidents Preceded the Death of the Girl.

Miss Edmands became so ill yesterday that a physician was hurriedly called in to attend to her. Later in the day Miss Edmands was asked by a reporter for the AMERICAN if Richeson was coming back to the home. This was soon after the minister had driven off in a carriage.

"I don't know whether he's coming back or not," she declared.

It was the only statement she has made since Richeson took refuge in her home last Sunday afternoon after the publicity given his name in connection with the death of Miss Linnell.

One of the young women's closest friends said that she is not seriously ill, having recovered somewhat from the first shock, but that she is simply worn out and could stand the nervous strain no longer.

Clergymen in the Dark.

Rev. Dr. Horr, president of the Newton Theological School, said he does not know whether he is to marry the couple or not. He was to perform the ceremony, aided by the Rev. Maurice A. Levy of Newton. Rev. Dr. Horr said he had not decided yet whether under the circumstances he could perform the ceremony.

Other members of the Edmands family are likely to break down soon under the strain, it was declared to-day.

A business associate of Moses Grant Edmands asserted that Mr. Edmands feels the affair even more keenly than his own family realize.

"It has placed him in a terrible position," this friend said. "He has hardly known what action to take.

Richeson Should Explain.

"We—I mean his intimate friends—have advised him that he should temporarily, at least, postpone his daughter's wedding to Mr. Richeson, in the face of all that has been said about the Linnell case, and he has agreed that is the only proper thing to do.

"I do not say that his confidence in Mr. Richeson has been shaken, but I feel, owing to the peculiar circumstances, that it is only fair that Mr. Richeson owes it himself, to the Edmands family and to the public, particularly the family of the poor dead girl, to make a statement explaining all that has been said about his engagement to Miss Linnell and his alleged desertion of her.

"It seems very strange to me that he has not done so. It may be that he can satisfactorily explain everything and I sincerely hope for the sake of Miss Violet Edmands that he can."

Richeson Asked if Girl Said Anything Before Her Death

Miss Linnell is dead, but why did you call me? asked the man at the other end of the line.

Because you were the only friend of Miss Linnell near at hand, I replied; and because we felt that you should know of the fact that you might come at once. Miss Linnell spoke of but one man as her fiance and she mentioned your name—at all times.

I remember that I baptized Miss Linnell at Hyannis three years ago, responded the Rev. Mr. Richeson. I know her folks at Hyannis, where I used to preach, but I do not know why I should be called in regard to the matter. You know the names of her parents, do you not?

I responded that we did, but that we felt that in that he was her fiance, in that she was out to lunch with him during the day, it was right that we should notify him at once.

Did she say anything before she died? came the voice across the line.

The question took me entirely by surprise, coming from the mouth of a clergyman and the fiance of a girl who had just passed away. I hardly knew what I said, but I retorted: No, she didn't say anything before she died, but she said something this afternoon.—Miss Inez Hanscomb's account of telephone conversation with Pastor Richeson when she called him up to tell him of Avis Linnell's death.

Mrs. Riley said that Rev. Mr. Richeson had been suffering from a nervous breakdown for some months. She felt that the reason he had not spoken thus far was due to the fact that Miss Linnell, to whom he had been scrupulously kept away from shielding it from publicity, and consequently he was unaware of how strange it seemed to the public that he had not made a statement.

She said that his work last week and last Sunday was so hard that, coupled with the news of the girl's death, the strain was more than he was able to stand. She said that beside his two services last Sunday he had officiated at a baptism and had conducted two funeral services during the previous week.

Mr. Riley stated that Rev. Mr. Richeson had spent part of his Summer vacation at Hyannis and a week at the Summer home of the Edmandses at Dublin, N. H. Mr. Riley stated that the minister had told him since his vacation that he was unable to sleep while at Dublin, owing to the elevation of the place. He had slept but very few hours during the whole week.

Has Faith in Him.

"You can't put it too strong," said Mrs. Riley, "that our faith in Rev. Mr. Richeson is unlimited and that it is my belief that he has the support of a majority of the members of the Immanuel Baptist Church.

"He is a noble man and a righteous one, and I have the utmost confidence in him and always shall.

"I can't believe that Mr. Richeson would go with two girls at the same time and stand up in the pulpit and preach such sermons as he preached. I don't believe that he could be such a fiend.

"The whole trouble with Mr. Richeson has been that he has worked too hard. He had an ambition to fill the church. He has been unable to do so. The minister would be able to. So many people nowadays have stopped going to church. Because he has been unable to achieve his ambition he has suffered a nervous attack.

"He has done much for the church, though. He has been getting a salary of $1,500 a year, and not one of $2,000, as has been stated. The pastor who served before him received only $1,000.

"Mr. Wilson, too, has turned against Rev. Mr. Richeson, couldn't do enough for the minister when first he came to the church. Most of us understand his motive."

AVIS LINNELL HOPED TO BE A MISSIONARY AFTER HER WEDDING

HYANNIS, Oct. 20.—A young woman schoolmate of Avis Linnell says that Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson was the one absorbing thought in Avis Linnell's mind from the day she joined the Baptist Church, of which Mr. Richeson was pastor, in this town up to the hour of her death.

This young woman had been in the Grammar School, in the High School and the Normal School with Avis Linnell and knew Avis better, probably, than anybody outside of her family in this vicinity.

She knew of all the plans Avis was making to get married after she left the Normal School to Rev. Mr. Richeson. Avis graduated from the Normal School in June, 1910, and she and her folks were planning to have the marriage take place in October. She had her engagement ring at the time she graduated, a diamond ring.

But, prior to the graduation Rev. Clarence Richeson had trouble with the people in the Baptist Church here and he resigned in April, 1910. He went to Boston and in the Fall, at the request of Mr. Richeson, Avis Linnell went to Boston to study music.

Before leaving Hyannis Mr. Richeson in talking over his plans with the father of the girl above mentioned said that he (Richeson) intended after his marriage with Avis Linnell to enter the missionary field, as seven of eight of his relatives were engaged in that work.

He said he believed he would enter the missionary field in China. Avis was also shaping her plans with a view to a missionary field.

Avis was the most brilliant scholar in the High and Normal School. She graduated from the latter school when she was eighteen years old, whereas usually graduates of this school are twenty years old or one as a rule. She was always studious and strongly individual, but after she got behind the church she gave up all worldly things.

She would not go to dances or even simpler forms of entertainment and she gave as her reason that Rev. Mr. Richeson objected to such things. The young woman who gave this information is prostrated with grief at the death of her friend, Avis Linnell. In fact she had made arrangements a week ago to take dinner with Avis Linnell last evening in Boston.

AVIS LINNELL WAS WITH RICHESON LAST FRIDAY AFTERNOON

A startling statement bearing on the tragic death of Avis Linnell has been supplied by George H. Baker, an employe of the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R., who had known the dead girl for years. He says Miss Linnell met her fiance, Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson, here in the South Station together about 5 o'clock last Friday afternoon and had a long conversation.

Mr. Baker also knows Richeson. He knew that they were engaged and as he had heard the engagement had been broken off, he naturally was surprised to see them talking earnestly together at the Summer street entrance to the terminal.

Also Mr. Baker's attention was attracted by the strange pallor on Avis Linnell's usually rosy cheeks. He always had known her as a light-hearted, happy girl, and her unnatural white cheeks and the earnestness with which she was talking to the clergyman made him pause and watch the couple for several minutes.

Mr. Baker's statement follows:

I went into the South Station through the Summer street entrance shortly before 5 o'clock last Friday afternoon, on my way to work. About 50 feet from the entrance I met Richeson, whom I knew by sight. The girl with him was turned from me, hence I noticed him first. As I passed I was three feet from them. I then saw that the young woman was Avis.

As I drew them both when they were engaged and had heard the engagement had been broken, I stopped after passing and looked back.

Avis was talking very earnestly; her eyes were fixed evidently on Richeson's face. She did practically all the talking. Her usually rosy cheeks were deathly white. This I noticed especially, for she usually had such good color.

Richeson all this time was, or seemed to be, in deep thought. He appeared to be listening to her and at the same time seemed to be thinking of something else. His face was stern and he acted very nervously.

After ten minutes I was forced to leave. They never moved from where I saw them first, save for the swaying of Avis's body as she talked to Mr. Richeson.—From the statement by George H. Baker, who saw Miss Linnell and the Rev. Mr. Richeson in the South Station last Friday afternoon.

Avis Linnell, Deathly Pale, Talked to Richeson on Friday

PASTOR OVERCOME BY NEWS OF AVIS LINNELL'S DEATH

Mrs. Frank Riley of No. 22 Oxford street, Somerville, a member of the Rev. Mr. Richeson's congregation, is authority for the statement that the pastor was so overcome by the shock of the news of Avis Linnell's strange death that he could not eat his dinner at her home last Sunday afternoon.

"Rev. Mr. Richeson came to our house at 1 o'clock last Sunday afternoon," said Mrs. Riley, "in company with Mr. Riley. Mr. Richeson went into the parlor, and I found him a few minutes later lying on the couch, saw that he was very pale, and I asked him if he was ill.

"He said that he had received news of the death of a very dear friend. I asked him if I could get him something to relieve him. He asked me if I had any camphor in the house. I replied that I had none, but that perhaps the smelling salts might help him. He replied that they might help him.

"Dinner was not served until 2:30 and Rev. Mr. Richeson ate hardly a half-dozen mouthfuls. The poor man seemed to be suffering from a nervous breakdown.

Spoke of the Tragedy.

"Before he left the house that afternoon he spoke further of the death of his 'dear friend,' whom I understood to be Miss Linnell. He said that he had received word by telephone that she had died in convulsions, and that he had been asked if he was with her on the previous Saturday afternoon. He said that he was not.

"I said to him, 'I suppose that you will have to go to Hyannis and officiate at the funeral.' He replied that he would not have to go, but that he supposed the girl's people would expect him.

"At the service in the church that evening during the sermon he again alluded to the girl's death. At the time he was speaking on the suddenness with which death came to the young, the middle-aged and the old and referred to the fact that a friend of his, a very beautiful girl, had just been taken away by death."

Mrs. Riley was asked if she knew that Rev. Mr. Richeson was engaged to the Linnell girl.

"I knew that he was engaged to a girl who lived in Hyannis at one time. He never spoke her name to me but he had often spoken of the fact that he was engaged to a girl there.

"Did you know that he was engaged to Miss Edmands?

"Yes, I knew that. I have met Miss Edmands in our church in Cambridge."

Asked if she had known of any of the circumstances surrounding the breaking of the engagement with Miss Linnell by Rev. Mr. Richeson, Mrs. Riley said:

"I never knew when he broke his engagement with the Hyannis girl. Mr. Richeson never spoke of it and as he did not see fit to give any information I did not consider it my business to inquire. I thought that it was a matter of his own personal business."

Y. W. C. A. GIRLS MOURN FOR PRETTY AVIS LINNELL'S DEATH

The Boston Young Women's Christian Association home on Warrenton street, in which pretty Avis Linnell of Hyannis met her tragic death, is still a house of mourning with the 300 girl roomers still bowed in grief.

Each and every girl, whether she was personally acquainted with the dead girl or not, portrays poignant grief, which has invaded the usually happy place, and the name of Avis Linnell is on every girl's lips.

Those of the girls who didn't know her intimately are none the less sincere in their bereavement and from each and all comes a word of sympathy for the parents of the dead girl.

Among the home officers it is apparent that personal grief attends, for Miss Linnell was beloved and popular because of her rare disposition and kindly mien at all times during her living at the home.

Ties of attachment for the pretty Hyannis girl are manifested in the faces of all the inmates. It is apparent, too, that the shadow of death which fell on the home last Saturday night still lingers, casting the otherwise jovial atmosphere of the place.

Coming and going from the home last night the girl inmates covered their faces and walked quietly on their way, accentuating the feeling of oppression and sorrow that each one feels so genuinely.

Chums Go Away.

Both Miss Barkhouse and Miss Ziegler two of the girls who perhaps knew the dead girl better than all the others, were said at the home last night to have gone away for an indefinite stay and it is stated on good authority that both have been advised by the police officials to absent themselves from the Warrenton street house.

At the West street candy store, where Miss Barkhouse has been employed, an AMERICAN reporter was informed that the confident of Miss Linnell had taken a leave of absence for a few days.

Girls of the home stated that Miss Barkhouse and Miss Ziegler were soon going away. That each of these girls will prove valuable witnesses for the police, and particularly the former, because of her letter, in which she told of the death of Miss Linnell, is freely asserted.

"We hope that the man who gave the poison to Miss Linnell will be caught by the police," declared two of the girls to an AMERICAN reporter at the Y. W. C. A. home on Warrenton street. "She never intended to do away with herself, of that we are all sure. She was a lovable girl and we cannot believe she had willingly done any wrong. Some man whom she may have trusted tricked her, and now we hope the last time, Saturday night, she was with us that she knew death was the first thing in her mind.

"Why, if she had planned to kill herself, don't you think she would have written a farewell note, explaining to us her sorrow and what had driven her to suicide? But we are sure she intended to live."

Parties Are Given Up.

People passing the corner of Tremont and Warrenton streets stop and look at the Y. W. C. A. home, recalling the recently that occurred in the death of the beautiful Hyannis choir singer. Many passing the building walk slowly as they glance up at the windows and express sorrow for the Linnell girl's sad fate.

There was no music in the guests' room for parties last night and even the parties, in which the girls have been prone to amuse themselves of evenings, were discarded. Here and there girl inmates are in groups of twos and threes and discussed the tragedy in subdued tones. It was so noticeable in comparison to the open boisterousness and gaiety which reigned in the sitting rooms prior to the falling of the shadow that claimed the choir singer.

"I didn't know Miss Linnell to speak to," said one girl, "but I knew her by sight. Of course, we feel this thing and it has come like a blow to us all. Some master mind, and that possessed by a man, is undoubtedly to blame for the death of Miss Linnell. We all hope the guilty one will be apprehended, and soon, and he dealt his just deserts.

"The temptations for a big city, especially for a girl away from her parents, is very great, but when a girl gets confidence in a man who begins by showing little unobserved and then gradually mingles on his attentions, the temptation is all the greater.

"Some one gave Miss Linnell poison, knowing that it was deadly, and that would be no more. That makes it murder and there isn't a girl in the Association but who earnestly wishes for the prompt arrest of the fiend who committed the deed."

According to one of the girls familiar with the office of the Y. W. C. A. Home the police have completed their work in securing depositions from the inmates and this would seem to be borne out in the statement that Miss Barkhouse and Miss Ziegler have been persuaded to change their abode for the time being.

A New Medical Compound

The compounding of Cadum was not the result of mere chance or accident, but the outcome of patient investigations and experiments by a studious chemist, who was convinced that the old method of taking internal medicines to cure external diseases was wrong. He found that an extract from the Juniperus Oxycedrus tree possessed wonderful curative properties on the skin tissues. This extract he combined with other antiseptic, healing compounds, which resulted in the product Cadum. Sufferers from eczema and other skin troubles find almost instant relief after the first application of Cadum. It stops the terrible itching of eczema at once, and is to be used when the skin is irritated, inflamed or diseased. Cadum is different from anything else, and has proved a blessing to many who have suffered for years from distressing, stubborn and disfiguring skin diseases. Many letters have been received from people saying they have been cured of cases that had been called incurable. These letters prove what a great remedy Cadum is. It is good for eczema, sores, eruptions, pimples, rashes, chafing, scaly skin and itching piles. 10c and 25c, all druggists.

RICHESON-EDMANDS WEDDING PLANS HALTED BY HER FAMILY

to be listening to her and at the same time seemed to be thinking of something else. His face was ashen and he acted very nervously.

After ten minutes I was forced to leave. They never moved from where I saw them first, save for the swaying of Avis's body as she talked to Mr. Richeson.

As I said, I was drawn to them at the first by the story I heard of his being engaged to another girl.

WHITMORE DENIES HE EVER SIGNED EDMANDS WILL

It was reported that Howard Whitmore, an attorney with an office at No. 92 State street, was acting as counsel for the Edmands family, and that it was to his office that Richeson went yesterday. This, however, Mr. Whitmore emphatically denied. He said no conference had ever been held in his office.

"Do you know the Rev. Mr. C. V. T. Richeson?" he was asked.

"No, and I do not know him."

"Have you any connection with the Edmands estate?"

"No, I have no connection with that estate in any way."

"Did you ever place your signature on the will of George D. Edmands in 1906?"

"I never signed such a paper."

"How do you account for the fact that Howard Whitmore signed his name as one of the witnesses to the making of the will?"

"I can't account for it all," he said. "This whole affair is strange to me. I never saw the Rev. Richeson and wouldn't know him if I met him on the street."

"Do you know Chief Bagan?"

"Yes, I know him, but I haven't seen him for a number of years."

Then you have had no connection with this case either as a friend or as an acquaintance of the Edmands family or of Mr. Richeson?"

"The only thing that I know about the people that you mention is what I have learned from reading the newspapers. I don't even know where the Edmands family reside. That is, I know that they live in Brookline, but I do not know the street or number."

This case is a strange one, as the name of a Howard Whitmore appears on the will with the names of two other persons who signed the document as witnesses. The will was made in 1906.

SUBSTITUTE TO FILL RICHESON'S PULPIT SUNDAY

The Rev. Clarence Virgil Thompson Richeson will not occupy his pulpit in the Immanuel Baptist Church, Cambridge, on next Sunday. The pulpit will be supplied both morning and evening by the Rev. George Croff of the Newton Theological Seminary. The members of the finance committee of the Richeson's church would not deny that Mr. Richeson himself was furnishing the supply. The Rev. Mr. Croff is going over to Cambridge on a request by Professor Anderson of the Newton Theological Institute.

BENEFACTRESS OF PASTOR IS DYING, IGNORANT OF CASE

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Oct. 20.—Miss Patsey Feltz, the middle-aged woman whose name has been linked with that of Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson of Cambridge, is dying here to-day, ignorant of the case of the youth on whom she spent her money in helping him to get through college. Miss Feltz, who is a victim of consumption, first met Richeson when she was a teacher in the high school at Liberty, Mo. Richeson was a student at the William Jewell College in the same city.

It was to Miss Feltz that Richeson owed his rapid rise in the ministry, for it was through her that he was enabled to secure an education. In all she loaned him $700. She is the daughter of a Baptist minister, and it was in church work that the couple were thrown together. It soon became one of the cherished objects of the woman's life to help Richeson succeed in the world.

Richeson stood well in his classes, but his funds were low, and, in despair, he faced the necessity of giving up his ambition and going into trade. Then Miss Feltz offered to advance the money required to finish his collegiate course.

The offer was accepted, and Richeson became the debtor of the spinster school teacher in the sum of $700, for which he gave his notes.

Completing his course at the Missouri College, young Richeson went to the Newton Theological Seminary, and after being ordained and receiving a pastorate began repaying with interest his financial obligation to his benefactress.

Miss Feltz still holds his final note, on the principal has been repaid and only the interest on this one note remains unpaid.

"Miss Feltz has not seen Mr. Richeson for years," said a member of her family. "In fact, none of the family has seen the young man since his departure from Missouri for Boston.

"We know nothing of him socially and did not even know his antecedents when Miss Feltz became interested in the ambitious struggle of the youth and out of the nobility of her soul advanced the money needed to launch him on a career of good.

"It was merely the promptings of the generous nature to aid in the career of a promising student."

The Feltz family comes from old Kentucky stock and was prominent in affairs of the Southland in ante-bellum days. Recently the family seems to have been under an unfortunate star.

Miss Jane Feltz, sister of Miss Patsey Feltz and athletic instructor of the Y. W. C. A. of this city, fell in the gymnasium on Wednesday and fractured an arm, an aunt recently died and an uncle's leg was broken in a fall.

RICHESON ORDERED BOUQUETS SENT TO ADDRESS IN BOSTON

Flowers were sent by Richeson to Miss Violet Edmands, his fiancee, and probably to Avis Linnell, during the past year, according to the statement of Mrs. Davis, wife of a Cambridge florist. Richeson bought the flowers in Lafayette square and directed them to be sent to the Devonroad house in Brookline.

"He sent a number of bouquets," said Mrs. Davis. "He was especially particular about a big bouquet he sent last Christmas and came himself to the store to see that it suited him before it was delivered.

"He also sent flowers to a place in Boston, possibly the Y. W. C. A. building, but about this I am not positive. I do not recall ever having heard the name of the Linnell girl."

FATHER OF FIANCEE OF CLERGYMAN IS A WEALTHY CLUBMAN

Mr. Edmands, father of Richeson's fiancee, is a member of the exclusive Dilloh Club. Among the members of this club are Franklin McVeagh, secretary of the Treasury, who entertained President Taft at his magnificent Summer home at Dublin this Summer; Hon. George P. Leighton, one of the leading progressive Republicans of New Hampshire, who owns a magnificent estate in Dublin; Mrs. Paul Revere Frothingham of Boston; Miss Amy Lowell, a sister of President Lowell of Harvard College; Edwin Smith, the noted director of pageants and an artist; Daniel Cathin, vice-president of the Tobacco Trust; Rappaport Pennoyer, the noted sculptor of old coins; William Amory of Boston, and many other prominent Boston people.

Visitor at Edmands House.

Not the least of the day's busy happenings at the Edmands house was the visit from a tall, clerical looking man late last night. He walked down Devon street, went up the steps and rang the bell. At that time the place was in darkness. A moment later the lights had been turned on and a maid opened the door.

The tall visitor gave her his card. The maid left him standing on the veranda and went inside. She was absent five minutes. It looked as if there was a consultation inside as to whether or not to admit the visitor.

When the maid returned she whispered to him, and a moment later he took his departure. He was followed by the newspaper men. As soon as he came into the light it was apparent that tears stood in his eyes.

"Who are you?" he was asked abruptly.

He made no reply.

"What is the church going to do about it?"

"Sir, I don't know, I don't know."

He spoke almost mournfully. He appeared very downhearted, whether at the evident refusal of the minister to see him or the future of the church. As he moved off he was heard saying, as if to himself:

"I don't know, I don't know."

In a few minutes an empty taxi which had been seen to pass came up the street, as if following the mysterious visitor. He disappeared, and it was thought he took the taxi for his return trip to Cambridge.

The unknown visitor of the Edmands house was none other than a prominent member of the Immanuel Baptist Church. It was said his purpose was to help Richeson, and that his downcast bearing was the result of the minister's supposed attitude when the stranger's card was brought to him by the Edmands maid.

Whether or not this occurrence will have any influence on the legal members of Richeson's Cambridge congregation could not be learned last night, though members were found who knew of the visit but refused to reveal the identity of the visitor.

Snubbed by Richeson.

They said the man was not a representative of the church, but of his own volition went to Brookline in order to assure the pastor that his flock was busy and that a movement has been started to clear its good name by exposing investigators to fix the blame where it belongs.

However, there were others who maintained the visitor at the Brookline home did really represent a portion of the parish, and that his failure to gain admission was paramount to a snub to him and those he is said to have represented.

It was at first thought that when Rev. Mr. Richeson left the Edmands home yesterday afternoon, he had gone to the office of Mr. Edmands for a conference with his attorney, Herbert E. Valentine, a Trustee with Mr. Edmands of the estate of which Miss Edmands is a principal heir, has offices with Mr. Edmands.

Mr. Valentine, however, stated, when seen by a AMERICAN reporter, that Mr. Richeson did not come to his office.

When the Stomach Stops

Working Properly, Because there Is Wind in It, Use Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets to Set It Going Again.

A Trial Package Free.

The doctors call it flatulency, but unprofessional folks know it as "wind on the stomach," and a most distressing state of things it is. It is a serious condition of this great motor organ. Always annoying and painful in the extreme, at times often, leading to bad and fatal results. The stomach embarrassed and hampered with wind cannot take care of its food properly and indigestion follows, and this has a train too appalling to enumerate. The entire system is implicated—made an active or passive factor in this trouble and soon becomes a questionable boon.

All this is explained in doctor books; how undigested food causes gases by fermentation and fermentation, in which process some essential fluids are destroyed—burnt up—caused by chemical action, followed by defective nutrition and the distribution through the alimentary tract of chemicating elements, and as a consequence the stomach and entire system is starved. Plenty of food, you see, but spoils in preparation and worse than worthless.

A deranged stomach is the epitome of evil; nothing too bad to emanate from it, but the gas it generates is probably its worst primary effect and the only way to do away with this is to remove the cause. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets go to the root of this trouble. They attack the gas-making foods and render them harmless. Flatulency or wind on the stomach simply cannot exist where these powerful and wonder-working little tablets are in evidence.

They were made for this very purpose to attack gas-making foods and convert them into proper nutriment. This is their province and office. A whole book could be written about them, and then not all told that might be told with profit to sufferers from this painful disease, dyspepsia. It would mention the years of patient and expensive experiment in effort to arrive at this result—of failures innumerable and at last success. It would make mention of the different stomach correctives that enter into this tablet and make it faithfully represent all.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are not alone intended for the sick, but well folks as well; for the person who craves hearty foods and wants to eat heartily and run no risk of bad effects, they act like a charm and make eating and digestion a delight and pleasure. They keep the stomach active and energetic and able and willing to do extra work without special labor or effort. Don't forget this. Well people are often neglected, but the Stuart Dyspepsia Tablets have them in mind.

A free trial package will be sent, any one who wants to know just what they are, how they look and taste, before beginning treatment with them. After this go to the drug store for them; everywhere, here or at home, they are 50 cents a box, and by getting them at home you will save time and postage. Your doctor will prescribe them; they say there are 40,000 doctors using them, but when you know what is the matter with yourself, why go to the expense of a prescription? For free trial package address F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Building, Marshall, Michigan.

DEPUTY WATTS'S STORY OF THE CAPTURE OF PASTOR RICHESON

PASTOR SHOWS GREAT EXCITEMENT WHEN PLACED UNDER ARREST.

We went to the Edmands house at midnight and surrounded the house. At ten minutes past seven o'clock the first signs of life appeared in the house. Sergeant Rutherford of the Brookline police was pounding at the rear door when one of the ladies who had been awakened by the noise called to him from the house and asked what was the matter.

"We are police officers of Boston and Brookline," replied Rutherford "[illegible] Rev. Mr. Richeson."

"Wait a moment," replied [illegible].

She went upstairs and aroused Mr. Edmands. He went to the front door and opened it. His eyes dilated with surprise when he saw Deputy Superintendent Watts, Chief Inspector Dugan and Sergeant Rutherford standing on the veranda in front of the door, while back of them on the street were groups of newspaper men, photographers and residents of the neighborhood, all with their eyes fastened on the house.

"[illegible] who we were and what we came for, adding, 'We were ordered to get into your [illegible]'

"[illegible] Watts, all right, gentlemen," said Mr. Edmands. He then explained that he had heard the noise they had made and had not seen the crowd in front of the house, but said he had [illegible].

I then told Mr. Edmands the police were there to arrest the Rev. Mr. Richeson, his guest, on the charge of the murder of Avis Linnell and to take him [illegible].

"I believe it," exclaimed Mr. Edmands brokenly. "There surely must be some mistake. Mr. Richeson is too good a man to have committed such a [illegible]."

Mr. Edmands then asked permission to talk over the telephone with his own attorney, saying that he was inclined to question the right of the police to take Richeson from the house under the circumstances.

EDMANDS CONSULTS ATTORNEY.

"Mr. Edmands stepped to the telephone and called up his counsel. Mr. Edmands [illegible] and after a few moments' talk hung up the receiver and informed the police that his attorney had advised him to let the prisoner go. However, Mr. Edmands then told the police that Richeson was [illegible] and that I would find it in the southwest corner of the house.

Their coming had been expected. The door was not locked. Mr. Edmands [illegible] and Mr. Richeson in a low voice said, 'Come in.' The clergyman was lying in bed. Chief Inspector Dugan walked over to the side of the bed and asked:

"You are the Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson?"

"Yes," replied the clergyman in a faint voice.

"I have to tell you that you are under arrest on the charge of the murder of Avis Linnell," said Dugan. "I also want to warn you that anything you say may be used against you. Have you anything to say?"

For an instant it looked as if the prisoner was about to speak. Then he [illegible].

"No, I have nothing to say," he replied.

Then walking to the door in silence Mr. Richeson stepped out and stopped on the veranda in full view of the crowd of newspaper men, photographers and onlookers. He flinched for an instant as he heard the click, click of the cameras, then tightly closed his lips and we hustled him into a tartcab and were driven at a fast speed to headquarters.

[illegible] prisoner in Chief Dugan's private office, where we were closeted with him for a short time. To all our questions he replied that he did not [illegible] time to make any statement whatsoever. He was asked if he wished to make any statement to the press or to see any newspaper man and he said he did not wish above all to see any reporters.

During the trip to headquarters and while he was in Chief Dugan's office he was greatly perturbed. His lips kept twitching in a nervous way and he was constantly tightening them as if in an effort to keep from saying something.

After the conference we escorted Richeson to the municipal court [illegible] a formal application for a warrant for his arrest on the charge of the murder of Avis Linnell.

Immediately after the prisoner was in the clutches of Dugan and Rutherford, Deputy Watts announced that he had learned that the pastor had purchased a large quantity of cyanide of potassium, the drug which killed Miss Linnell, on Friday, the day before the murder. This information came to headquarters late last night.

Deputy Watts said:

"I have come here to arrest Rev. Mr. Richeson on a charge of murder.

"I did not want to break him [illegible] Last night I asked Sergeant Rutherford to [illegible] the people on the ground to report to them that they must admit us.

"We were then sure that Miss Linnell and the minister were seen together last Friday afternoon in the South station."

At 8:05 a. m. the automobiles left the Edmands house for police headquarters in Boston.

In the motor cars were the prisoner with Deputy Watts, Chief Dugan and Sergeant Rutherford, Detectives Mitchell, Patterson, Charles W. Wyatt, Michael J. Welch and Lawrence D. Sylvester, and official police stenographer Erwin H. Hauver.

Next to the alleged discovery that the pastor bought the poison either Tuesday or Wednesday of last week, the most important link in the chain of evidence the police have been finding for the past four days was the testimony of George Baker, a railroad employe who knew both the minister and Miss Linnell.

He told the police he saw both in the South Station, in earnest conversation, last Friday afternoon. Later the girl had seen her mother off on the train for Hyannis.

All Night Siege.

After an all night siege, when the officials exhausted every means in their power without battering down the door, Deputy Superintendent Watts and Chief Inspector Dugan and Sergeant Rutherford of the Brookline police department succeeded at getting into Edmands house at No. 18 Dover street, where they went to arrest Rev. Clarence Virgil Tremont Richeson, pastor of the Immanuel Baptist Church of this city, on the charge of murdering Avis Linnell.

The door was opened at 7.15 o'clock after the police had been hammering outside for nearly two hours, trying to arouse the [illegible].

When the door opened about [illegible] was lying [illegible] from the waist up. [illegible]

The entire neighborhood was aroused by the noise the police made as they rapped repeatedly at door and window.

It was about 7 o'clock when Deputy Watts observed the first signs of life inside the house. Others had seen the [illegible] lifted as if three pairs of eyes were peering [illegible] blinds were drawn.

Sergeant Rutherford was with Deputy Watts on the rear piazza, beating at the glass panelled door.

Police Are Admitted.

They rapped for several minutes. Finally a maid pressed her face up against the glass panel.

"Who are you?" she asked.

"We are police officials and we want to see Mr. Edmands, and tell him so," said Deputy Watts.

"Yes, hurry and get him," said Deputy Watts.

Rutherford put in another word as he saw the maid seemed to be hesitating:

"We don't want to break down the door, but we intend to wait here until we see Mr. Edmands."

The maid departed, returned and told them to go around to the front door.

It was 7.15 when the three officials entered the house and awoke the arrest.

At the time of the arrest of Rev. Mr. Richeson, his fiancee, Miss Violet Edmands, was lying ill in bed in the house. Just how the arrest of the man she was to have married next Tuesday week affected her, could not be learned. Her friends feared that she would become more seriously ill.

Battered at Doors.

Since 1 o'clock this morning the police besieged the Edmands house on all sides, trying every ruse they knew of to gain admission. They knocked on the doors, banged at the windows, rang the front doorbell and shouted until they grew hoarse in their endeavors to get a response of some kind from the inmates.

The missing link in the chain of fact which they have been trying to wind about the pastor for the past four days was furnished, it was declared to-day, by Dr

POLICE GET RICHESON AFTER BESIEGING HOUSE ALL NIGHT

Minister Faces Druggist in Questioning at Headquarters.

day Richeson bent over the bed in which his fiancee lay prostrated and heart-broken. He touched her hair. In a trembling voice he said

"Don't cry. Everything will be all right."

The clergyman was mute when questioned later at police headquarters. He was arraigned in court. He was handcuffed. He was charged with the murder of Avis Linnell. He was held without bail.

Taken to Jail in Van.

Richeson was removed to the Charles street jail in the police van at about 2 o'clock. He was taken from the detention room at the Court House in the van with two teamsters, other prisoners who had been arraigned on various charges, such as drunkenness and assault and battery.

The pastor's appetite is nothing up. He ordered two dropped eggs on toast and a glass of milk. This was brought to him from the Crawford House. He consumed the repast with a relish. It was with a keen eye that he looked over the surroundings in the court room where he was arraigned and the detention room, where he was kept after the arraignment until his removal to the jail.

Before his arraignment in court Richeson was confronted by William Hahn, the Newton Centre druggist from whom it is charged he bought cyanide of potassium to kill ten men. Richeson said nothing.

It was Hahn's story told to Deputy Chief Watts that led to Richeson's arrest. This story of the purchase of the deadly poison is almost incredible. It will shock the country.

"I have a dog that is whining around. She is about to become a mother. I want to kill her. I want something that will act quickly."

That is the story that Hahn told the police that Richeson told him. A dog that was about to become the mother of puppies—and he wanted to kill her!

Money a Motive?

Friends of Miss Avis Linnell, who is shrouded in her grave in the white wedding dress in which she was to have been married to Richeson, will see in the words of the clergyman an inhuman significance when they recall the pitiful facts about the murdered girl.

The police have what they regard as the motive for the crime in hand. It was money. Miss Edmunds, an estimable girl, a graduate of Vassar, a musician of skill, is rich. She inherited a great deal of money from a grandfather.

Richeson is poor. His salary had been small. He worked his way through college. He even worked in a Boston restaurant to help pay his way. The police will charge that he was tempted with the wealth of the brilliant Brookline girl and that he fell.

One would search French fiction in vain for a more fiendish crime. It is away above the ordinary murder in cunning. The police and the medical examiner, even, at first believed it a suicide.

All of these connected with the remarkable tragedy are notably prominent. The very profession of the man who preached "Thou Shalt not Kill" lifts the crime from the sordid surroundings that usually accompany such a tragedy.

The crime recalls that of Carlyle Harris of New York. Harris resembled Richeson somewhat in appearance. There was the same Gibson like face. Harris was arrested for the poisoning of a girl named Helen Potts. He gave her poison in the guise of medicine. He was electrocuted after a protracted legal battle for his life.

The murder of Mabel Page is recalled by almost every one who discusses the Linnell murder. But here was a crime conceived and carried on by one who had not the cunning that was responsible for the murder of Avis Linnell. Tucker executed for this murder, was a boy of no especial standing in the community.

New England is a church going section. All about this murder is the church element. It is a crime within the church fold. The prisoner is a clergyman. The victim was a choir singer and church worker. She died at the Y. W. C. A.

Miss Ines Hanscomb of the Y. M. C. A. called the Rev. Mr. Richeson on the telephone late Saturday night and told him that Miss Linnell was dead.

"Did Miss Linnell say anything before she died?" Miss Hanscomb says he asked.

That very question, in so many words, came up in the trial of Hattie Le Blanc for the murder of Clarence F. Glover. It was sought to show that [illegible] at the Glover home was told that Glover had died the voice of the woman asked, "Did he say anything before he died."

"Have Nothing to Say."

On arrival at police headquarters Mr. Richeson was taken into Chief Dugan's office. Chief Dugan told him his rights and asked him if he had any statement to make. The minister replied coolly:

"I have nothing to say."

The police then awaited the arrival of William Hahn, the Newton druggist, who declares he sold the minister cyanide of potassium. It was an hour before Mr. Hahn arrived at police headquarters.

In the meantime Mr. Richeson picked up an AMERICAN telling of his arrest on the charge of murder, and for an hour read the complete story of his case. He glanced over other morning papers. He made no comment. He appeared perfectly unperturbed.

Chief Dugan told an AMERICAN reporter that he did not care whether the prisoner made any statement or not. He said the police case was complete and that it was now a matter for the courts to handle. He said he would ask for a warrant for the minister charging him with murder of Avis Linnell and would ask for a continuance of the case until October 31, the date previously set for the Richeson-Edmunds wedding.

Mr Hahn arrived at police headquarters at 10:30 o'clock and hurried at once to Chief Dugan's office. Chief Dugan called in Stenographer Hoover to take down any statements that were made when the Rev. Mr. Richeson was confronted by Mr. Hahn.

Mr. Hahn confronted the prisoner in Chief Dugan's back office. The minister got up and shook hands with Mr. Hahn, thinking during the minister, Mr. Hahn repeated the story of how Richeson had purchased cyanide of potassium at his store. His statement was taken down by the official stenographer.

After Mr. Hahn's statement Chief Dugan asked Mr Richeson if he had anything to say. The prisoner shook his head. He did not utter a word.

Mr. Hahn was asked several times if the man he faced was the Rev Clarence V. T. Richeson, to whom he sold poison, and each time Mr Hahn declared positively that the man before him was the Rev. Mr. Richeson, who had bought cyanide of potassium at his store last week.

Immediately after securing the identification and Mr Hahn's statement Deputy Superintendent Watts and Chief Dugan and Mr Hahn went to the court house, across Pemberton square, where they went before Judge Duff of the Municipal Court. The police officials told their story and Mr. Hahn repeated his statement.

Judge Duff immediately issued a warrant charging the Rev Clarence V. T. Richeson with the murder of Miss Avis Linnell. The prisoner in the meantime remained in Chief Dugan's office under guard of Inspector Lynch of police headquarters.

The prisoner was taken to the court house from police headquarters at 11:15 o'clock. The scene in Pemberton square when Richeson was brought out of police headquarters has seldom been paralleled in criminal history in Boston. Not even during the trial of Charles L. Tucker was there more excitement about the court house.

Over 2,000 people were jammed in the often brought tears to the eyes of [illegible] square and from every window in Bar- tenders. To-night [illegible] tisers Hall and the great office buildings from five to a dozen people crowded to get a view of the prisoner.

It took ten policemen to open a line so that the detectives could make their way with the prisoner to and from police headquarters to the court house. Two hundred men and women jammed the steps of the court house and 500 more crowded the corridors of the court house.

Throughout the long wait for the prisoner to be brought out there was intense excitement in the great crowd. More than half the throng were women. They fought with men in their efforts to get a good view of the clergyman prisoner.

HEAD OF NEWTON SEMINARY MUCH SHOCKED BY CASE

The Rev. Dr. George Edwin Horr, president of the Newton Theological Institution, was interviewed to-day about Mr. Richeson's plight. He was to have married him on October 25. He is greatly shocked by the case.

"I have just returned from a trip elsewhere, and I don't know much about this matter but what I am reading in this paper. (The paper was the AMERICAN.)

"It makes awful reading, and I hope that the conditions are not so bad as they are represented.

"Mr. Richeson, while a student at our school, did not attend any of my classes, so that I was not brought much in touch with him. Dr. English, the president of the school, would know his standing, but this I cannot speak."

PRAYER MEETING TO-NIGHT AS PASTOR IS LOCKED IN CELL

To-night the members of the Immanuel Baptist Church of Cambridge, of which the Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson was pastor, meet in prayer. From the time Mr. Richeson first came to the church from Hyannis he made the Friday evening prayer meetings one of the leading features of his weekly church work. He always presided and his prayers were so fervent that they

SOCIETY APPROVES COMPLEXION BEAUTIFIER

"In seeking a dependable complexion beautifier," says Mae Martyn in the Los Angeles Examiner, "no preparation for whitening, beautifying and toning the complexion equals a simple, inexpensive lotion, made by dissolving 4 ounces of spurmax in ½-pint of either witch hazel or hot water, then adding 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine. Where witch hazel is used, the lotion dries more readily on the skin.

"This splendid lotion does not rub off or show like powder, and is very fine for removing that shiny, sallow look from the skin. It makes the skin very clear, satiny and beautiful, and is so good that a bottle of it is sure to be found on the dressing table of most society women.

"I find it splendid for the skin, as it is very beneficial, while powder clogs the pores, enlarging them, causing blackheads and rough, wrinkly complexions."

Fairylike Puffs

AN unusual dessert consists of puffs which, when carefully made, are of fairylike daintiness.

The way to have them quickly and at best is this:

Into a saucepan put a cup of water, a half teaspoonful of salt, and half a cup of butter allowing these ingredients to melt and come to a boil.

Then add not little by little, but all at once a cup of flour. Stir and cook till the mixture starts away from the sides of the pan.

Turn into a bowl and allow it to stand until the batter is slightly cooled. Now add, unbeaten, four eggs, one at a time, beating each egg thoroughly in before adding the next. Cover and let stand two hours.

Bake on a baking sheet having formed the batter into small round cakes. Leave one inch of space between them and bake in a brisk oven, with heat from the bottom, for fifteen minutes.

Reduce the flame and cook very slowly until the cakes become dry and crisp. Fill them with the cream given below, making incision with a very sharp knife in each and decorate with whipped cream sprinkled with grated maple sugar.

Filling—A cup of cream and a cup of milk placed together in a double boiler. When boiling point is reached add a tablespoonful of butter and a teaspoonful of flour rubbed together. Cook until the liquor begins to thicken. Stir and cook three minutes; then take from the fire and cool.

How I Made My Hair Grow

Woman With Marvelously Beautiful Hair Gives Simple Home Prescription Which She Used With Most Remarkable Results

I was losing my hair with dandruff and falling hair. I tried many advertised hair preparations and various prescriptions, but they all ingredients of them made my hair greasy so it was impossible to comb it or do it up properly. I think that many of the things I tried were positively injurious, and from my own experience I cannot too strongly caution against using preparations containing wood alcohol and other poisonous substances. I believe they injure the roots of the hair. After my long list of failures I finally found a simple prescription which I can unhesitatingly state is beyond doubt the most wonderful thing for the hair I have ever seen. Many of my friends have also used it and obtained wonderful effects therefrom. It is not only a powerful stimulant to the growth of the hair and for restoring grey hair to its natural color, but it is equally good for removing dandruff, giving the hair life and bringing out the gloss and beauty of keeping the scalp in first-class condition. It also makes the hair easy to comb and arranges in any form. I have a friend who used it two months, and during that time it has not only stopped the falling of her hair, but a wonderful increased its growth, but it practically restored all of the hair to its natural color. You can obtain the ingredients from almost any druggist. Apply as directed and in a few days the dandruff will disappear, the hair will stop coming out, and in a few weeks a new growth of fine hair will be seen. It will surprise you how quickly your hair will become thick, lustrous and beautiful.

Editor's Note—Miss Allen is a well known society girl of Detroit, and the above statement is vouched for by the Detroit Medical Journal. Readers who desire to try this prescription should write to Miss Allen for the exact formula, which she will be glad to send them.

HICTANER

The Man That Lived in the Water—One of the Strangest Stories Ever Written

By Jean de la Hire

PART I.—(Continued).

FROM beneath his lofty brow the brilliant great black eyes shone with intelligence and pride. His mouth had opened and closed when he spoke, as any human being's would, and when he smiled he disclosed fine, even teeth of striking whiteness.

Oxus and Fulbert stood looking at Hictaner, their creation and their pupil, in mute admiration.

Their strong hands grasped the long, nervous arms of the man fish.

All around them the life of the seas was going on as usual.

Algae, corals and mollusks were fixed to the rocks. Sea-anemones abounded, and now and then the swift passing of a bellying fish set their graceful tentacles in motion. Strange crabs, whose shells bore tufts of algae, ran here and there across the golden yellow sand of the floor. The water, illumined by the electricity, seemed light as air.

Ten times magnified by the micro-telephone, Fulbert's voice reverberated through the great submarine room.

"We are glad to see you, my son," it said, "though we have not feared for your safety, knowing you are invincible.

"Nevertheless, the consciousness of your absence has been all the harder because we loved you so."

"Yes, dear child," said Oxus's voice now. "Have you been quite well? Aren't you very tired?"

"I have been neither ill nor tired," replied Hictaner smiling.

Now you must tell us all, about your campaign," exclaimed Fulbert. The resonance of his voice made the micro-telephone vibrate with prodigious intensity.

"The Unknown's" Story

"YES indeed, I will tell you all I know, master," said Hictaner, "though it won't be any more than I wired you by the telephonographs at the Balearic Isles, the Indian Ocean and the Pacific. However, dear father and dear master, come.

"I was just beginning my breakfast when you announced your coming. I am so sorry that you can't eat the fruits of nature, as I do! I have brought back some exquisite sea-weed and a sort of anemone, which is delicious, I'll put it in the sea."

"Alas!" sighed Fulbert hurriedly, "you know we are too old to eat our only source of life is the experimental platter. However, dear father and dear master, come on."

"Oh! my child, it is enough for us to behold you in the fullness of your youth and strength and beauty! You are our only joy!"

Hictaner walked gracefully, with a rhythmic crunch. Oxus and Fulbert slipped nimbly following him, for the weights on their feet were somewhat less than pering and water. Soon they were standing before [illegible] and rose chairs of stone, luxuriously cushioned with algae and mosses.

Some shell fishes and sea anemones were arranged in large cups formed by beautifully opalescent shells upon a polished table of stone.

When they were seated upon the benches, Hictaner sat down opposite them.

"Eat, my child," said Fulbert, "you can talk afterward."

The request was needless. Hictaner seized the shellfish with what seemed to be a gold dagger drawn from his aluminum belt.

He swallowed it delicately after showing it to Oxus and Fulbert hurriedly, "you know we are too old to eat our only source of life is the experimental platter. However, dear father and dear master, come on."

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

THE opening scene of the story is laid in a mysterious house on the Island of Cabrera. Fulbert, a Hindhist monk of the Tibetan Lama, arrives and is greeted by Oxus, another monk. These two have discovered a way to gain world-power by placing the lungs of a fish in a man, enabling him to live under the water as well as on land. Oxus selected his wife Bertha to give birth to a boy, upon whom the monks planned to experiment, but a girl is born instead.

Fulbert, however, goes to a Lamaist monastery in Spain and takes from Martina Delgitres her male infant born out of wedlock. The mother [illegible] and

The threats are not taken seriously, but finally several battleships of various countries are destroyed. Admiral Jerram, of a French squadron lying in Villefranche, is notified to take his fleet to the straits of Gibraltar and join forces with a British fleet to block the Mediterranean against the "Unknown." In the French fleet is the torpedo boat Cyclone, commanded by Lieutenant Louis de Closrat, whose friend is Enos Falcic-Calre. Take Care of Your Clothes

Do not spoil your clothes is an injunction that might be given to many full-grown women as well as to the little girls who find it so tiresome a restriction, and, unfortunately, it is not only the owners of deep purses who are utterly regardless as to the proper care of their garments.

Persons of limited dress allowance often toe-will their poverty and exercise economy in purchasing, while they neglect quite simpler means of giving long life to what they do manage to acquire. It is a curious fact that she who is used to the services of either a regular maid or a clever housemaid is far more careful when left without these services than she whose household is too limited to admit of anything in the way of being waited upon.

The habit of finding garments well brushed, well folded, and well packed is, perhaps, conducive to keeping good order in drawers, wardrobes, and boxes, and it is obvious that much time is saved by such same order.

Every one wants to save time, and nearly every one has to make more changes of dress during the day than formerly, and it is exasperating, even when one has only one's self to blame, to come in from a morning ride in charge for luncheon party to find the creatures of the toilet tangled in one drawer, the gown needing a few stitches, and the hat crushed by having been stuffed carelessly into the wrong box.

Hats take up a great deal of room, but their trimmings are so light and simple at the present moment that it is sometimes worth while to pin the flowers afresh each time, or adjust the "mounts" now so beautifully made ready to go on with a stitch or two.

One large drawer or box can be kept for such, and the hats themselves can then lie one on another in a deep box or ottoman, but if the hat remains ready trimmed it should never be put away without careful dusting and a glance to see that no flowers and feathers require picking out smooth or recurling.

Modern dresses occupy so very little space that, if folded with perfect smoothness, several will lie on one shelf or in one drawer, where hanging space is limited. Hanging up, of course, is best, but whichever method is adopted, the gown should be put away at once, after a good shaking, except when needful to air them thoroughly, as in the case of blouses and skirts worn at tennis or any heating sport. To drop off a dress on to the floor is to shorten its days; it does not take many seconds to hang it on a bed-rail, if nothing better serves.

Boots and shoes often get cruel treatment; they should be "treed up" while warm from the feet, and gloves pulled out flat and laid together. The old saying of the "stitch in time" always holds good, for, though some persons have a knack of pinning imperceptibly what should be hooked, pins wear the fabric.

Long holland bags are very valuable possessions into which to slip skirts before hanging them up, and when so guarded they can be left on any hook if the wardrobe be too full; such bags are invaluable to travelers or women workers who live in lodgings.

Clean and half-soiled blouses should never be heaped together, and a lavish use of tissue paper is to be recommended; all silk or linen blouses should have a layer between them.

Lastly, such articles as are cleaned, not washed, should never be allowed to become too dirty before they are sent to be done up.

Stays wear twice as well if they go to the cleaner and repairer before they are overmuch soiled.

More Charitable

He stepped from the stairs leading to the cells into the court as though to the manner born. Did he want the deputy to show him where to stand? Not he!

He gazed up at the familiar face of the magistrate and half smiled. But his honor's face wore a frown.

"This is the seventeenth time I've seen you before here," said the candi sternly.

This was not the sort of reception he had expected. He was hurt.

"Well, yer honor," he said sadly, "I've seen you sittin' in that chair for eight years, but I've never thought of complainin'!"

DEFINED

"What is woman?" asked the speaker at a public meeting.

"Woman," replied a man in the audience—a married man—"is an animate being, with the power of speech abnormally developed, and entirely surrounded by a dress that buttons up the back."

"Yes," Kitty whispered impatiently.

"Oh, nothing—nothing much. He's had a bit of an accident. Not serious, but an ugly, narrow shave." Again he made that swallowing movement. "And —the boy's dead," he said.

Kitty recoiled. Her white face was more eloquent than any words, for Martindale gave a rough exclamation.

"Oh, for heaven's sake, don't sentimentalize over it," he burst out quickly. "These creatures are lower than the beasts. This thing is your fault—the result of your interference this afternoon. It was Ee woman who tried to kill Gomez; but it might have been me—d'you understand?" His voice rose excitedly. "It might have been me!"

He held out his arm toward her, picking at the sleeve of his coat. Kitty's eyes, following the movement, saw the long upward rip in the cloth that told of a knife turned aside.

"Jack." She felt sick and stunned. "Oh, man, Jack. And the woman?"

He turned on her savagely.

"You think more of her than of me!" he cried. "Then let me tell you—she's put where she'll find it uncommonly difficult to play any treacherous tricks again."

A vision of the inside of the frame house, dimly seen that afternoon, rose up before Kitty's eyes. She put out groping hands. It was the English boy who sprang to her aid, as he turned, half reeling, aside.

After Night's Alarms

Whatever Laurence Baring may have thought of the scene in the drawing room of the bungalow last night must have been qualified extraordinarily by the reunion with his best host and hostess the following morning.

Nothing could have been more pleasant than the breakfast meal served on the verandah. The morning was bright and lovely, a faint breeze came up over the grass plains from the hills, and Mrs. Saxe herself was as bright and lovely as the morning.

It was the most surprising metamorphosis he had yet experienced in this bewildering land, this development of a small, grim-looking Kitty from the horror-stricken woman of last night. He observed John Saxe with a quiet attention as he played the host, and felt no less wonder. There was no trace of the drinker here, of the man whose voice had held an ugly, upper note of fear.

"It's the country," he told himself. "That darkness, those cursed wicked noises from the forest and the swamp that played the dence with my nerves last night. I was in a mood to imagine anything last night."

And in common justice he was compelled to admit that the man had not drunk a tithe of what he already was accustomed to seeing men drink in this climate, where strong drink loses its bite and raw spirit becomes innocuous as milk.

After the eminently pleasant meal Mrs. Saxe disappeared.

"My husband will show you over as much of Nokyoto as you can bear to see in this heat," she said. "And—he merciful in your note-taking, I beg! You travelers have such suave ways and such bitter pens. Don't prove too contemptuous of our savage civilization."

The Underlying Appeal

He could hardly have told why, but it seemed to him as though an appeal underlay her laughing words. He felt a sudden sense of differentiation for the second pefore him steal over him. He looked out over the open spaces beyond the garden where the great grass palms shone like green in the sun; best seemed to glitter in the air above them. All at once it seemed that it would be infinitely preferable to remain here on this cool verandah than go forth in search of experience in the company of this restless man.

The reluctance with which he drew himself together for the proposed ride was not understood by Martindale. For an instant something of the morose man of the night before peeped out behind his suave mask of courtesy.

"Perhaps you would prefer to remain and—rest after your journey," he inquired with an ironic solicitude.

Baring laughed and sprang up with alacrity and after a peg the men went out together.

Kitty watched them go. She had made her escape from the stranger's presence as soon as she could, the strain of appearing gay and natural before him had seemed more than she could bear; she was so bitterly conscious of what must be wiped from his memory—that scene in the drawing room last night, when he had seen them both with their masks lowered.

Of course, it was impossible that Baring could have any conception of the inner meaning of the scene. After all, Jack had been right and she had allowed her sentimentality to run away with her. Like the man of whom she thought, she told herself that the night and its eerie sounds had keyed her nerves up to hysterical pitch.

Sane and Plausible

Martindale had given her a very grave and ample explanation of the causes that had led to Gomez's action regarding the boy. He had conceded that the half-caste had acted with too great severity, and had allowed himself to be carried away by his passion. But there had been excuse for that passion; he had left her in no doubt of that. And then the scene in the evening—the woman's mad attack; that had required punishment. * * * Discipline had to be maintained or a wholesale rebellion would be the result.

It was all sane and plausible enough, and in the face of it her outbreak last night seemed foolish, almost despicable, considering how much depended on her discretion. Only—the remembrance of that swishing whip—and the half-caste's face!

At the thought Kitty flung her hands out before her with a gesture of repulsion.

"Oh, this accursed country—" she whispered passionately. "If we were free of it!"

If God would grant so much—that they might win their way free of it!

Until yesterday she had felt no remorse, no sense of guilt for the conspiracy of silence into which she had entered, the complex web of falsehood in which she had enmeshed the man she loved. Since those moments in the compound of that frame house far over yonder, hidden by the belt of trees that were the trailing fringe, as it were, of the forest she felt as though she stood on some vicious swamp of black oily mud through which she was being slowly but inevitably sucked down. The things she had dreaded—detection—some evil menacing them from the England they had renounced; the English boy with his memories of Suffolk and John Saxe's old, half-forgotten home; they had become as nothing. It was the evil that lurked here at Nokyoto, that she feared—the influence of that god of horror sitting securely enthroned in forest and in swamp.

But Martindale, riding through the hot land with Baring, had no kinship with her feeling. He knew neither fear of the past as represented by his English guest nor fear of the land that had taken him to her black breast and was showing him unimaginable secrets.

The Poisoned Man

By WINIFRED BLACK

I KNOW a man who is dying of poison.

He's a young man, comparatively, but his face is turning yellow and his eyes are turning green and his mouth is hard and he can't smile to save his life, poor thing; he's poisoned and he doesn't know it. Poisoned with his own greed, his own envy and his own discontent.

He made some money up in Alaska the other day.

"Hurrah!" we all thought, "he'll come home as happy as a clam, and maybe the poison won't work any more."

He came home in abject misery.

His partner had made more than he had, and not all the gold that ever ahone looks pretty to that man if another has a higher pile of it than he.

He was invited to be one of a distinguished company. "There," we all said, "he'll like that."

He came home with his face a gnawing picture of chagrin.

"There was a fellow there that did all the talking, he wouldn't give another soul a chance." "Was he a good talker?" "Well, I guess he was, but I wanted to talk myself."

The man has a son, and the son passed a high examination to go to college. "Good for him," we said to the man, "you must be proud of him."

"Well," said the man, "I dont see how John Jones came to pass in the same grade, he isnt half as smart as Jim; there must be something crooked somewhere."

And there was something crooked somewhere, and the somewhere was right in the man's own, miserable, unhappy brain.

When he dies he won't be satisfied with a good, comfy hole; he'll have to have the best one there is—or he won't play.

Poor, narrow, foolish fellow! Why, the very laborer who digs the ditch for him in his fine orange grove is happier than he is. The very man who holds his saddle horse for him to mount is better off, and no human being of sense would change places with that man for two days not for all the gold that he brought down from Alaska.

He's poisoned—poisoned with envy and with greed and with ungenerous hate, and then he wonders why no one likes him, and why all happy laughter stops when he comes around, and why the room that was gay with chatter a moment before is still as death when he brings his bitter face into the range of the firelight.

Poison and poisoning, for I'd as soon live in the house with a skeleton as to sit at the table or to walk or talk with him. His disease is catching, it is infection; keep away from him or you'll catch it yourself.

Revenge

Midnight was drawing nigh, and the professional pianist, who had pounded the keys for more than five hours, felt he had more than earned his fee.

Wherefore he went to the hostess and gently hinted that he wished to cease his labors.

"Er—perhaps I'd better not play any more to-night," he suggested wearily. "Ah—you see—well, there's the neighbors, and they might be annoyed."

"Don't you worry about that," answered the lady of the house cheerfully. "We shan't mind about the neighbors. It's a certain fact that they poisoned our cat, and if they did, there's nothing too bad for them. You go on playing, Mr. Longhere!"

BUT DIDN'T SHE?

She—Speaking correctly, darling, should I say, "I will have a new bonnet?" or "I shall have a new bonnet?"

He—Speaking correctly—absolutely correctly—my love, you should say, "I won't have a new bonnet."

A mattress that renovates itself

Ordinary mattresses have to be renovated frequently to keep them from getting sour and lumpy.

But Red Cross Mattress filling is made pure and odorless by a special sterilizing process, and kept that way by a patent automatic ventilating system, with which each mattress is equipped.

You can have any kind of filling—hair, cotton felt, African fibre, or Red Cross Silk Floss—and it will never grow lumpy or clammy.

Ask your dealer. If he hasn't it we will see that you are supplied. Booklet free. Look for Red Cross label on mattress.

Eczema on Head Completely Cured

West Philadelphia Woman Tells How It Was Accomplished

So many people go through life troubled with eczema of some sort or other, and the disease is so loathsome, that we beg all to read the following letter as a benefit to themselves and their friends:

"Resinol Ointment and Soap completely cured me of Eczema of the head in about three weeks. Have recommended them to several friends, who have found them excellent articles for all skin eruptions. I shall continue to recommend them wherever possible."

IDA B. LESHER,
West Philadelphia, Pa.

It may be a simple burn, a cut or a boil, or a carbuncle, or a felon, or eczema, or barber's itch, or pimples, or blackheads, or boils, or rash, or prickly heat, or piles, or itching, or eruptions from poison ivy. If it is a skin trouble, Resinol Ointment is always effective. It gives instantaneous relief. It must not be classed with patent preparations. Resinol Ointment is a product of science. It has stood the test of years. It is practically impossible to find a physician who does not both use it and recommend it.

It does not grow old and is as easy to apply as cold cream. Resinol Soap used in conjunction with the Ointment aids in the speedy healing of irritations. For sale by all druggists. The best way to carry Ashes is in a Hod!

Crawford Ranges

Have an Ash Hod in the base into which all the ashes fall far below the fire. They can't bank against the grates and warp them, and they can be emptied easily without spilling.

The Coal Hod is alongside the Ash Hod—out of the way. This feature is a wonderful labor and trouble saver and is patented.

Another trouble-saver of the Crawford is the patented Single Damper. One motion—slide the knob to "kindle," "bake" or "check"—the range does the rest. No damper mistakes.

The Oven has cup-joint heat flues that heat it alike in all parts.

Ask the Crawford agent to show you and write us for circular.

AUTO GYMKHANA SHOW FEATURE

By J. C. KERRISON.

An indoor gymkhana for electric automobiles will take place to-night at the Grand Central Palace, New York, where the electrical exposition is now in session. The event will be held on the third floor of the building, over an oblong course of one-tenth of a mile. A list of events has been arranged by the Electric Automobile Dealers' Association.

Among the events will be a potato race, a barrel event and a "London bridge" contest. There are a number of other events on the program which, apart from the amusing side, have for the main object the bringing out of the many features found in the electric automobile. Among these features are quick stopping, ease of control, cleanliness and non-vibration.

An organization for selling motor trucks and furnishing service to their owners has been incorporated as the International Motor Company, under the laws of Delaware. The new concern, which is capitalized at $100,000, is to have the commercial management and general supervision of the motor truck factories of the Plainfield, N. J., and the Mack Brothers' plant at Allentown, Penn. These factories however, are to be continued as distinct organizations. Co-operation and use of 2,000 trucks from the two factories is promised for New York and Boston. The branches and agencies of both the Saurer and Mack Brothers' companies, both well-known branches and agencies of the International Motor Company, which will also conduct in all of the principal cities service stations for thorough inspection and maintenance of both Saurer and Mack trucks.

Advices received from C. M. Kittredge, Jr., assistant secretary of the Denver Chamber of Commerce, state that a tour starting from Denver on October 31 and finishing in New York on November 7 has been planned, to be run under the auspices of the Denver Chamber of Commerce. It is said that the contract will be a paying affair, to be governed under the rules and with the sanction of the American Automobile Association. The itinerary of the tour has been mapped out, and it leads through Omaha, Des Moines, Davenport, Chicago, Cleveland, Buffalo, Syracuse, Albany and New York.

The transcontinental tourists who left New York on October 5 arrived at Des Moines, Iowa, on Wednesday evening, delighted with the results of the trip so far. The Garford touring cars, accompanied by the private schooner, had kept well to schedule and had covered the distance in good order. The run of Tuesday was one of 113 miles, and although the longest run thus far in the tour, was performed in good time, despite the frequent showers that made the roads heavy and the going hard.

GOLD COAST LOSES IN JUNIOR ELECTION

The result in the elections of the junior class at Harvard was a victory for the "Yard" against the so-called "Gold Coast," those living in the dormitories outside of the "Yard" party, being overwhelmingly elected president. Austin of Santa Barbara, Cal., of the track team, was the choice for secretary and treasurer.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS; FINANCIAL NEWS

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

The investment demand for both bonds and stocks has improved slightly, but the big money continues to go abroad. New York bankers, interior bankers and international bankers have this week placed more loans abroad, and it is now estimated that a total of at least $100,000,000 has been loaned by them in recent weeks, principally in Germany.

$ $ $

The Interstate Commerce Commission has full legal authority to reduce the rate on anthracite without waiting for the Supreme Court to decide the Coal Trust case, and it is the belief in some authorities that leads many brokers to expect an announcement of a segregation plan for the Reading and other coal roads. Lehigh Valley's great strength recently is based largely on that theory.

$ $ $

It is this great volume of idle money in the United States that is the chief depressing influence. An abundance of money has no influence on prices of stocks while it is lying idle in the banks. It is not money in existence that determines prices or measures business activity, but money in use, and conservative bankers say there never was a time when so much cash and credit was lying unused in this country.

$ $ $

Action of U. S. Rubber after declaration of its dividend makes speculative holders of Beet Sugar feel rather uncertain as to the future. The Beet Sugar people are making good their word absolutely and they deserve credit for it, but persons manipulating the stock should not forget that the recent earnings are due very largely to the accident of a sugar beet crop failure in Europe this year. Crop failures are very uncertain cornerstones for investment structures.

$ $ $

Exports of cotton for the three months ended September 30 amounted to $79,233,465, as compared with a total of $52,805,000 in the corresponding period of last year. The cotton is going abroad this year, but it does not seem likely that the value of the exports for the twelve months will be equalled in 1911-12, owing to the sharp drop in the price. The value of the cotton shipped last year was $564,-482,000, and the staple was then selling about five cents a pound higher than at present, so that a conservative estimate of the total of this year's shipment is $520,000,000.

$ $ $

Many compilations of the probable effect of the abrogation of the by-laws on Steel earnings were presented in brokerage offices yesterday in most of them the company stands to gain more than it will lose from abrogation of the lease. While this lease was signed, W. E. Corey, then president, refused to put his signature to the document on the ground that he thought it a bad bargain. One of the chief geologists of the Trust also advised against the lease which has made many as a stock market deal that an a bushel of iron ore in the ground. The Trust has taken out little more than 2,000,000 tons of ore and more than 5,000,000 tons to its credit and fully paid for.

By the end of 1915 it will have paid $5,500,000 to the Great Northern ore trustees under the terms of the lease, and it is generally supposed that heavy shipments of ore will be made between now and that time. In 1915, in an effort to extract and pile up the enormous plants of the Trust will be on fire for which payment is compulsory under the lease.

$ $ $

While cash and credit are going begging figures published by the Census Bureau show what the country can do when under the depressing influence of political raiders. This showing gives one a hint of what might happen if the laws could be so framed as to encourage legitimately the limits of business activity and thus give every business man a chance to prove what he could do, and thereby restore confidence. Agitation has been going on so long that the time must be near when such a condition will exist, and the result will be startling.

$ $ $

There may be some developments more or less startling in Smelting before long, and for this reason many of the best judges in the Street are advising their customers not to sell it short. At the same time they are not telling them to buy it. It appears to be one of those stocks that should be let alone for a while.

$ $ $

The selling of Amalgamated Copper in the last day or two is said to be based on a conviction that while the general metal situation is improving fundamentally the price of the metal will have a final slump before the commodities before a sustained rise takes place. The stock is being driven up on all declines.

$ $ $

It is reported that the Greene-Cananea Copper Company will declare a dividend of 20 cents a share about the first of the year, and that it is the intention of the management to put the stock on a dividend basis of 40 cents a share next year.

STOCKS DROP IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—A downward movement followed the opening of the stock market to-day, practically the entire list being affected.

Great Northern Ore opened ½ higher, but lost the major part of this gain on the next sale. A slight gain was made in United States Steel common, but that stock receded within the next few minutes.

Union Pacific, after opening ¼ higher, declined over a point. Great Northern preferred was one of the weakest stocks in the initial trading, falling a point. At the outset some of the issues were disposed to show strength, but the depressing influence of the selling movement overwhelmed the scattered buying.

A mixed tone was displayed in the copper group. Amalgamated opening ⅝ higher, but American Smelting declining ⅜. Erie preferred opened ⅝ higher. Canadian Pacific, Rock Island and Pennsylvania were unchanged. Union Pacific started ⅛ above Saturday's close.

Americans in London were subjected to narrow trading, but the tone was firm. Canadian Pacific was in demand in London, firmness being attributed to the determination of the railroad heads to abandon the project of building 1,500 miles of track through the Great Lake region, this having been deemed a losing investment.

Man Cannot in a Moment Accomplish or Even Map Out Changes That Will Require Centuries

But Thought and Discussion Help. We Print and Answer a Very Earnest Letter.

Copyright, 1911, by American Journal Examiner

We ask our readers to give thoughtful attention to the letter below. The writer offers suggestions that he believes will abolish many of the ills through which human beings suffer.

The writer believes that ownership of land by the public instead of by private individuals would be a great step forward. He believes in the building of houses for those that have none at public expense, and in heavy taxes on incomes and on inheritances.

He believes that women should have the absolute right to divorce—thinks that it would improve the human race.

He believes in the supervision of the welfare of children by the nation.

Here is his letter:

Editor Boston AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—Your powerful pictorial representation of "Age, Childhood and Poverty," and your burning words to point out the pity of it, moves me to my first communication to a newspaper.

As you so scathingly say, "Old age without money is put upon the treats . . . the hardest work of he hardest workers will barely keep body and the spirit together . . . and the children born for ight and green fields wither in m." But are you not a little unat least by inference, when you "What Congress, what court will ange this?"

The Congresses, the courts, in and of themselves can do nothing effectual to change this until plans which will change it are explained to and understood by the people. When that happens these plans will become law, because our government is fairly representative, and when the people really are interested in having a law passed it is passed.

Then, what is the plan, or what are the plans, which will change this? Truly, here is a subject worthy of discussion so long as Age droops for proper food, clothes and quarters; and so long as Childhood is denied anything which will make it happier, stronger or wiser for the struggle which is ahead. It is beautiful to help an old person, and whoever does so helps himself as well, but whoever brightens the life of a child, whoever helps a little one on the way toward purity of knowledge or kindness, whoever does this has done a benefit, not only to the child, not only to himself, but to all humanity so long as human life exists upon this planet.

There are many things which would help. One would be to give any woman who asks it a divorce without trouble, without expense and without any more cause than the fact that she does not want to live with the man. Can we expect the average of the race to improve rapidly so long as millions of women bear children for men they fear or loathe? Must women live a life of private, legal shame because youth and ignorance lead them into a natural folly? Away with this rot about the sanctity of the home where lack of harmony makes the woman hate the ties that bind her, and the man seek all his pleasures—some of them illegal—elsewhere.

And if we cannot have the single tax, how about a little law putting a maximum value on every foot of property, and decreeing that all the income from every lot and parcel in excess of a fair interest on the maximum value must go to the city, insomuch as it is the city which made the property valuable, and not the owner of the land. Confiscation? If yes, then only of an unearned advantage which should go to all the people, as it is all the people who create it.

How about using this money to build model tenements in the outskirts of the city where old folks could have rent free and small gardens to give them just enough to do for health and income? How about a national income and inheritance tax, to be paid out in pensions to the old who have no incomes and no inheritance? Would not these things make Old Age as comfortable and happy as is possible, if Poverty comes with it?

And how about a National Child Welfare Bureau, its work divided and subdivided, to see once a month that every child is getting the right food and care, and, if not, to take the child and the mother and their care off the shoulders of the man who cannot carry it all, and keep them where she can earn something and he can see them, but cannot go on creating more children to suffer and deteriorate the race?

D. R. M. R.

The reader whose letter you see feels that it is unjust to ask Congress and the courts what they can do to make conditions better.

It is not, however, unjust to ask them why it is that they never discuss the POSSIBILITY of doing away with the really great injustices in the world.

The Congress of the United States talked for months about tariff treaties, dishonest Senators, bribery, trusts, but there was no talk about the fact that nine-tenths of all the people worry; that thousands are very poor; that the old are cast aside like worn-out animals; that the young are exploited to build up the fortunes of a few, and that almost half of them, born in the great cities, die in their childhood, killed by lack of air, lack of sunlight and lack of proper food.

Certainly, in a nation that calls itself civilized, the cause of the young, of the very old and of all the helpless should be the chief subject of discussion.

As to our correspondent's idea as to divorce, that is not to be settled offhand with a single word. The man who advocates an easy divorce, even for the unhappy woman, does not prove his case when he proves that the woman is unhappy.

Men are still STRUGGLING TO MAKE THEMSELVES WORTHY OF MARRIAGE.

If in the beginning every woman had had the right to instantaneous divorce when she found the man brutal, unsympathetic and cruel, we should have no marriage now at all. For in the early savage days every man was brutal and cruel. Only the infinite patience and endurance of women have built up our comparative civilization from savagery.

Men are still going through a stage of brutality, in marriage as in everything else. And women are bearing the heavy burden in marriage, as in every other feature of this life.

But if women suffer now as they do, theirs will be the happiness and the triumph in the future, when we shall have developed really decent men, really perfect lives and sacred marriages.

Men by compulsion, and women through devotion and kindness will gradually bring about the unit of civilization, which will be the home occupied by a happy man and woman and their happy, healthy, intelligent children. Because experiments are unsuccessful and sorrowful, the entire plan must not be abandoned. And there will be no civilization, no real life, on this earth until men and women are good enough to live together all their lives, each contented with the other, and thinking of no other.

Private ownership of land has been discussed for centuries, and it will last for many years.

No man of intelligence denies the stupidity of individual land ownership, IN THEORY. This earth was given to all the living creatures upon it as their abode. It seems preposterous for any man to stretch out his hand and say, "I own this acre, this mile, or these hundred miles of the earth's surface." Such ownership is preposterous, IN THEORY, and it is made to seem as preposterous as it is, when the man who but a moment before said, "I own," shuts his eyes and sinks back into the earth owning nothing.

Yet, no man can truly say of his own knowledge that the day has come for public ownership of land, or for immediate granting of divorces upon application.

This earth has changed greatly, forests have been changed into fertile fields, swamps have been drained, houses have been built, and men have stuck to them on the edge of the forest, fighting wild animals and wilder savages.

The man has cleared his land and held it at the risk of his life, grown food for others and developed the nation, BECAUSE HE OWNED THAT LAND.

Every step toward our Western country, every step of the human race in its more civilized forms, moving westeward through the ages, has been a step, due to man's desire to own the soil and have a piece of land that he can call his own.

That desire for ownership of the land is innate in the individual. And will survive many years, many centuries perhaps. You cannot develop or improve men by denying them the gratification of their desires. You must gratify the desires while they exist, in order to have harmony on this earth. By giving some nobler ambition, some higher desire, you may eliminate gradually, but not by force, the desire

A man cares for his child and fights for it, BECAUSE IT IS HIS CHILD.

He cares for his idea, struggles for it, gives up his life in defense of it, because it is his idea.

And so he cares for his land and develops it, and he cares for his country, BECAUSE IT IS HIS LAND. It would be a very dangerous thing in the present state of civilization to do away with that powerful force, that passion for possession.

But men might well regulate it, tax it, limit its pernicious excesses, while encouraging the better side of what is, at best, a low instinct of property.

Already the day has come for national inheritance tax and national income tax. These taxes cannot be long postponed. Ninety men out of a hundred are in favor of them now.

Such taxes would be used to help the old and make their lives comfortable, and taxes of that kind would be used for all public purposes. For it is only just that wealth should pay the bills of a government that protects wealth. This day will go by in which all the big bills are paid by poverty and the great wealth POSSESSED ALMOST free of tax by the few.

The suggestion for a national child welfare bureau is a suggestion worthy of thought, and calling for GRADUAL development.

A bureau is no stronger than its weakest spot. The mere establishment of a child welfare bureau does not necessarily mean improved conditions for children. The nation should, and we believe that it will, shortly establish bureaus for the protection of the health of children, doing as much for the son or the daughter of a woman as the Agricultural Department now does for the son or daughter of a horse, or a cow, or a pig.

The nation cannot now undertake individual care of children, although it can, and should, prosecute and punish severely those that exploit children through child labor and those that kill children with poisoned or adulterated foods.

The suggestion that in the case of a poor man the nation should take the care of the child from the shoulders of the man and arrange matters so that the father may not create other children is one that will not endure a moment's thought.

The world's work is done by the children of poor men. And much of the best work in the world is done by the children of apparently incompetent men.

A law such as that suggested would have deprived the country of the services of Abraham Lincoln. For he was the son of a poor, incompetent father. He was born in a cottage of one room, born on a dirt floor. Out of the sacrifices of the poor, and the devotion especially of the poor mothers, come the really great and useful workers of the world. No law must ever keep a child from its chance of birth.

We offer this letter to our readers for their earnest thought. It is at least an effort to answer some of the questions and solve some of the problems.

We talk and discuss matters in our day, as the tiny creatures building up the coral islands would have talked if they could have talked. Not one of them could have raised those islands above the water by any plan—only time could do it. But each had to build his cell, or there would have been no coral islands.

Professor Droppers' Appointment a Commendable One

If Governor Foss had raked Massachusetts with a fine-toothed comb, he could not have found a man more qualified to assume the important duties of Railroad Commissioner than Professor Garritt Droppers, whom he has appointed to succeed Mr. White.

Professor Droppers is a scholar and is especially learned in that branch of academic thought which deals with public affairs and with the laws of trade. Above all he is an able, an independent and a progressive man in every sense of those terms.

By the appointment of Mr. Droppers, Governor Foss has reconstructed the Railroad Commission, which he once denominated a joke. With Chairman MacLeod and Professor Droppers constituting its majority, the people of Massachusetts may have good reason to believe that now at last their Railroad Commission will protect their interests against the overreaching tendencies of the public service corporations committed to their control.

The Railroad Commission will now cease to be the godfather of every railroad or street railway scheme to exploit the public, and the public may rely with confidence upon its recommendations.
